HIGHWAY ROBBERY

A. Olson, the Sixth Street
Tailor, the Victim.

THE CRIMINALS ARE ARRESTED.

Both are Young Toughs Who Have Lived Here For Years. The Crime Confessed By One of Them.

A. Olson, the well know Sixth street tailor, was the victim of a dastardly highway robbery on last Sunday morning about 1 o'clock, while on his way home, which nearly cost him his life. As it is, his injuries are sufficient to confine him to his house for several days. That he escaped with his life is due to the fact that the shot bag broke with which he was assaulted, and not to any compunctions on the part of the dastards assaulting him. Robbery was the motive of the assault, but the miscreants only succeeded in getting Mr. Olson's watch for their pains, and they are now prisoners in the clutches of the law.

The robbery occurred near the corner of Eighth and Holly streets, just opposite the Whittier school.
Mr. Olson was proceeding at this late hour on his way home when he was met at this point by two men, who came across the street, and before he could defend himself they assaulted him, one of them striking him with a billy made of shot. He was knocked down, but not entirely senseless, spraining his ankle as he fell. They then continued to beat him about the head and face until the shot bag broke, having pounded the flesh on his face to a jelly. He made violent outcries, which frightened the men, so they snatched his watch and ran away without getting the few dollars in change which Mr. Olson carried. Mr. Olson then, in spite of his injuries, made his way home, and the police were notified by telephone of the dastardly crime.
Dr. Hemstead was also summoned and cared for Mr. Olson's injuries, which, while very painful, were not dangerous. The officers went to Mr. Olson's residence, and, after getting as good a description of the men as Olson could give, they spotted their men, Jake Sylvester and Alfred Plummer, and locked them up, putting one in the jail and one in the lock-up, so they could not arrange a strong story of their whereabouts.

These men were suspected as the guilty parties at once because they answered the description given by Mr. Olson, and because they were seen by Officer Derocher hurriedly coming from the north side a few moments after the robbery occurred, and because it was later ascertained that they were seen about town where Mr. Olson was, and were known to have heard a conversation
Mr. Wallace had with their victim about some rent due, which they supposed Mr. Olson had been paid and had on his person. Their suspicion was further corroborated by finding blood spattered over the sleeve of Sylvester's coat. The officers, however, to cinch the case, determined to put the prisoners through the sweat-box process, and on Monday morning Sheriff Erickson and Deputy Winters succeeded, it is reported, in getting Plummer to give the whole story up, including the whereabouts of the watch. As a result the officers made a demand of Pat Corrigan, employed at Mc-Cabe's saloon, for the time-piece.
Mr. Corrigan denied having the watch, but when the officers placed him under arrest for receiving stolen property, he got the watch and gave it up.

The men were arraigned in the municipal court on Monday morning charged with highway robbery, and their preliminary examination was set for Monday, March 20th.

Mr. Olson is doing nicely at the present writing. Stories have been circulated about the city at different times that his condition was dangerous, but this is not true. Dr. Hem-stead says he will probably be about in a couple of weeks, his sprained ankle being the most painful of his injuries.

Highway robberies have been too numerous here lately, and public sentiment is very strong that the miscreants guilty of the offense should be shown no mercy.

A Good Idea.

Send your friends a nice photograph for an Easter souvenir from Marie A. Canan's over post office.

Free Government Lands.

M. E. T. Holmes, traveling agent for the Canadian Government free lands, was in town this week and appointed Jas. R. Smith agent for this locality, who will be pleased to furnish all information as to how to obtain 160 of the finest farm lands in western Canada. Call on him and get some pamphlets describing the country.

TIMOTHY ENRIGHT DEAD.

A Brainerd Boy Gives Up His Life in the Philippines in His Country's Service.

On Saturday afternoon a telegram was received in this city from Gov.
Lind, announcing the death at Manila of Timothy Enright, who enlisted from this city in the 13th Minnesota volunteers. The governor that day received a cable message, from Col. Ames in command of the regiment, announcing the death of Mr.
Enright as the result of an accident from an electric wire. Mr. Enright, with his regiment, was engaged in police duty in patrolling the city, conceded by all, the most important and most arduous duty in the service there. Just how the accident occurred will not be known until mail advices are received. Mr. Enright has a brother, M. J. Enright, and sister, Mrs. John Boyle here, who, with a large number of friends and acquaintances deeply mourn his loss.
But it will be a comfort to know that he died heroically in the services of his country and his country's flag.

Mr. Enright enlisted at Minneapolis on the second call for troops by the president. When the call was made he was employed in the N. P.
boiler shops here and had lamented that he was not in the service. When he saw the call in the papers he threw down his tools, called for his time, and went to Minneapolis and enlisted and was sent with 300 other recruits to fill up the 13th. He has written home on several occasions and reported he liked the service, being well and healthy and having gained in weight while in Manila.
The DISPATCH only three or four weeks ago published a letter written to his brother, M. J. Enright, which was very interesting and full of hope.
The grief stricken relatives of Mr.
Enright have the sympathy of the community in their affliction.

Meat is worth $1 a pound in Manila. This is probably due largely to the fact that most of the Manila butchers have recently gone into the saloon business.

The sultan of Sulu is to be offered home rule under the American flag, but he will never be able to realize the full extent of his good luck until he hears from the dime museum managers.

The burdens of taxation laid upon liquor saloons are regarded with equanimity by the average citizen. The decision of the commissioner of internal revenue requiring the payment of a special tax by proprietors of room saloons who may employ an orchestra to attract customers will be accepted as justifiable and exemplary. The performance is held to be a musical entertainment liable to taxation. A source of misery may be protected by law, but its maintenance ought to be discouraged in all legal ways.

An application has been made by S. L. Hutchins, John E. Patton and other leading colored citizens of Chattanooga, Tenn., for a charter for the National American Colonization Association, the object being to organize branches in the southern states. The association is formed with a view to colonizing negroes in the west and securing from congress a concession to allow the colonies so formed the right of state government and representation in congress, etc. The plan was organized by S. L. Hutchins, a negro lawyer, who has given the question of "What to do with the negro?" a great deal of study. Hutchins was a circuit judge in North Carolina during the reconstruction days, and it is said of him that he came nearer to giving satisfaction to the whites in his circuit than any negro who ever held a like office. Hutchins gives a reason for his proposed colony that "the people of the United States should be given an opportunity to see whether the negro is capable of governing and holding office." The application for charter says that "it is not fair to judge of the negro's ability to conduct public affairs, to judge him by the failures he has made in office in the south. Given an opportunity when they are altogether dependent upon themselves, the negro will solve the question speedily as to whether he is worthy of citizenship and to be an integral part of the governing people." Hutchins claims that a number of the leading negroes of the south are in sympathy with him in the movement.

At the dedication of an immense convention hall in Kansas City the other afternoon, somebody uttered a loud call for "Pryor," one of the soloists with the Sousa band, which had been engaged for the occasion. The crowd of people present mistook the enthusiast's call for an alarm of fire and it was with great difficulty that a panic was prevented. As our civilization advances and things become systematized it will, no doubt, be necessary even to suppress old and honorable family names in the interests of public safety.

GEN. WHEATON TAKES PASIG

FILIPINOS GETTING A TASTE OF REAL WARFARE.

The City of Pasig, Near Manila, Attacked and Captured by the American Forces After an Hour's Fighting—Rebels Were Unable to Stand Up Against the Determined Onslaught of Gen. Wheaton's Men—Thirty Filipinos Killed and Sixteen Taken Prisoners—The American Loss Is Three Killed and Fourteen Wounded.

Manila, March 15.—Gen. Wheaton attacked and captured the city of Pasig, east of Manila, yesterday afternoon. The enemy made a stand for an hour, but at the end of that time were forced to retreat. The loss of the Filipinos was thirty killed and sixteen taken prisoners. Of the United States forces six were wounded.

At daylight Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton's divisional brigade, consisting of the Twentieth United States infantry, the Twenty-second infantry, eight companies of the Washington volunteers, seven companies of the Oregon volunteers, three troops of the Fourth United States cavalry and a mounted battery of the Sixth artillery, was drawn up on a ridge behind San Pedro Macati, a mile south of town. The advance was sounded at 6:30 a. m., the cavalry leading the column at a smart trot across the open to the right, eventually reaching a clump commanding the rear of Guadalupe. Supported by the Oregon volunteers, the advance force opened a heavy fire on the natives. The response was feeble and desultory, apparently coming from handfulls of men in every covert. While the right column was swinging toward the town of Pasig, they advanced, pouring volleys into the brush. The small body of rebels made a determined stand at Guadalupe church, but the enemy was unable to stand the assault. At 7:30 a. m. a river gunboat started toward Pasig. The rebels were first encountered by this vessel in the jungle near Guadalupe. Steaming slowly, the gunboat Poured a Terrible Fire from her Gatling guns into the brush. For all of an hour the whizzing of the rapid-fire guns alternated with the booming of the heavier pieces on board. In the meantime Scott's battery on shore was shelling the trenches and driving the enemy back. The artillery then advanced to the ridge of bamboo and drove a few of the enemy's sharpshooters away with volleys from the carbines. The artillery then advanced and met with little opposition. In the meantime the infantry had been sent forward in extended order, the Washington regiment resting on the bank of the river, each regiment deploying on reaching its station, furnishing its own supports. The entire column then wheeled toward the river, driving the enemy toward his supports, and then advanced on Guadalupe. The artillery moved to a ridge commanding Pasig and Pateros. By this time the enemy was in sullen flight along a line over a mile long and the firing was discontinued temporarily in order to give the troops a rest before making an attack on Pasig. The enemy's losses were believed to be severe. After a short rest Gen. Wheaton resumed the attack on Pasig. Scott's battery, supported by two companies of the Twentieth regiment, advanced on Guadalupe by the road along the river bank, the remainder of the Twentieth regiment following the reserve of the Oregon volunteers. At 11:30 a. m. the column came in contact with the enemy and a gunboat steamed to the firing line and Cleared the Jungle on both sides, while the battery took up a position on a bluff at the right. The first shot from the American field pieces at 1,200 yards range dislodged a gun of the enemy at Pasig. After the town had been shelled the Twentieth regiment lined up on the bluff and the Twenty-second took up a position on the left of the place, with the cavalry in the center, whereupon the enemy retreated to the town. The gunboat then moved into a bend opposite and a hot fire on the rebel position was maintained along the whole American line until 2:20 p. m., when preparations were made for the attack. At 3 p. m. our gunboat started in pursuit of the enemy's armed tug, chasing her to the lake. At 3:30 a large body of the enemy was discovered working around our right flank and the Twentieth was moved to a commanding ridge. The rebels were met opposite Pateros, but the enemy bolted. The whole American line bivouacked at 5 o'clock. About 700 rebels are supposed to be marching northward a few miles to the southwest.

THAT'S WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH

That's What's the Matter With the Cuban Assembly.

Havana, March 16.—Gen. Gomez says he recognizes only one power in the island—that of the United States. All that the Cubans can do he declares is by permission of the American authorities, and therefore the military assembly can only talk. In his opinion the assembly is acting as it does because it wants to get more money out of the United States. In this connection he points out that the assembly first proposed to ask for $80,000,000. As for himself, he avers that he is not a beggar. The United States government offered the $3,000,000 and he has never asked an increase in the gift. Indeed, he says to ask more would be unmagnified and improper. To all callers Gen. Gomez speaks lightly of the assembly, declaring that it was his creation, as he did not wish to appear a dictator, and that the real military members who took no part in the vote to depose him will now resign. He calls the assembly "a collection of black clouds with much thunder, but little rain."

He did not communicate with Gen. Brooke yesterday, but will confer fully to-day.

The military assembly met in the afternoon with the usual guard. Most of the time was occupied in discussing the pronouncement which is to be issued with a view of justifying last Saturday's action in the eyes of the people.

Gen. Sanguilly introduced a resolution protesting against the acceptance of the $3,000,000, preceding it with a long preamble declaring the assembly was with the United States in maintaining order in Cuba. The motion called for the adoption of resolutions in the name of the armed people of Cuba. The first extended the thanks of the assembly to the United States for aid during the recent war. The second thanked the United States for the offer of $3,000,000, but went on to assert that, "owing to the assembly's exact knowledge of the needs of the Cuban soldiers, its members consider it their duty to declare the amount insufficient."

Ready to Co-operate

"We cannot honorably accept it as a gift, but only as a loan," the resolution proceeded, "as President McKinley's authorization is necessary to raise funds needed to accomplish the disarming of the Cuban troops and exclusively used for that purpose."

The third resolution appointed a committee of three to present these resolutions to President McKinley.

Gen. Sanguilly's motion was carried by 18 votes against 4.

The "document of justification" was then read. It is very long and cites cases to show the disobedience of Gen. Gomez to the assembly, declaring that those familiar with the inner history of the war know that strained relations always existed between him and the Cuban civil authority.

GOMEZ A HERO.

The People of Cuba Rally Around Him.
Washington, March 16.—Senator Quesada has received a cable message from Santiago which says:

"The people of Santiago disavow the assembly, sustain Gomez and are preparing a public manifestation."

Senator Quesada was criticised by the Cuban assembly for his action in assisting a negotiation with Gen. Gomez for payment of $3,000,000 to the Cuban army.

Dissolve the Assembly.

Havana, March 16.—A rumor is in circulation that the Washington government will dissolve the assembly. It is published in an extra edition of La Discusion. The suggestion has frequently been made to Gen. Brooke to take such a course, but up to this time he has formed no such intention.

AT THOMASVILLE, GA.

Presidential Party Guests of Mark Hanna.

Thomasville, Ga., March 16.—The presidential party arrived at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. The party was met at the station by Senator Hanna, Mayor Hopkins and a number of prominent citizens. The distinguished visitors were immediately driven to Senator Hanna's house on Dawson street. By special request there was no demonstration, but hunting and decoration were seen everywhere. The mayor had issued a proclamation inviting everybody to decorate their buildings in welcome of the chief executive and the request was liberally replied to.

FAT MAN DIES.

Alfred Daniels, Who Has Traveled With Barnum, Et Al.

Webster City, Iowa, March 16.—Alfred Daniels, a museum freak, who had traveled with Barnum & Bailey, Forepaugh and other like shows as a "fat man," died at his home, two and one-half miles west of Lehigh. He once weighed 604 1/2 pounds, and was on the road fourteen years. He amassed a fortune and three years ago purchased a fine farm. He weighed 480 pounds at the time of his death.

SILENCE BY DOCTORS.

New York Law Says Physicians Must Not Give Information About Patients.

Albany, N. Y., March 16.—Gov. Roosevelt has signed an amendment to the civil code which prohibits absolutely a physician from divulging any information concerning one of his patients, either before or after the death of the patient. For a long time the insurance law has permitted a physician to testify concerning the physical condition of a policyholder, which was at variance with the code.

Becker Confesses.

Chicago, March 16.—Augusta Becker, the sausagemaker who has been under arrest for four weeks on a charge of murdering his wife, made a full confession last night. He said that he cut his wife to pieces and burned the remains in a stove.

Republican Victories.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 16.—The entire Republican city ticket was elected by a majority of about 900. The Republicans were victorious in other towns which held elections.

PASIG BURNED BY THE REBELS

THE ENEMY PUTS THE TORCH TO THE TOWN.

Insurgents Encountered in Such Force Beyond Pasig as to Necessitate a Change in Gen. Wheaton's Plans—Cavalry Attack a Rebel Stronghold, Driving the Enemy Out—Several Sharp Engagements in Which the Rebels Are Driven Back—Natives' Avenue of Communication Now Closed—Gen. Otis Reports.

Manila, March 16.—Late yesterday Gen. Wheaton's column encountered the enemy in such force between Pateros and Taguig as to necessitate a change in the original plans. The cavalry attacked a rebel stronghold in the jungle, driving the enemy into Pateros. The Americans had one man killed and three wounded. Scott's battery shelled the city and woods effectively. Later the enemy crossed the river from Pasig. Two companies of the Second Oregon infantry cleared the right bank after a sharp engagement and then retired with three wounded. In the meantime the Washington volunteers closed in, driving small bodies of the rebels back upon Pateros. One man was killed. During the night the enemy burned the town of Pasig.

Later—Gen. Wheaton's brigade continues the work of clearing out the rebels around Pasig. The Washington volunteers have captured and burned Pateros, meeting with a sharp fire from the enemy while crossing the river. To-day's fighting was like that of the past week, the insurgents occasionally making a stand, but eventually fleeing. Their loss is supposed to have been small as the Americans were unable to see the enemy in the thickets. The progress of the advance is slow.

OTIS WILL BE SUSTAINED.

In Forbidding Negotiations Between Spaniards and Insurgents.

Washington, March 16.—Gen. Otis, in forbidding further negotiations between the Spanish at Manila and the insurgents touching the surrender of the Spanish prisoners held by the latter, acted upon his own authority. The government has not sent him any instructions upon this point, but it will unquestionably support him to the extreme in any action of that kind he may take. It is said at the state department that there have been some exchanges between the United States and Spain through indirect channels touching these particular prisoners dating back to the signature of the protocol last August. The United States government undertook finally to secure the release of the prisoners. It never contemplated trying to secure their release by ransom, but simply through the suppression of the insurrection, and cannot be held by any requirement of international law to do more than has been done to secure the release of the prisoners. There will be no relaxation of the efforts in this direction, but, as the United States campaign in the Philippines is being conducted with all the energy possible and as the release of the prisoners depends upon the issue of that campaign there can be no complaint of failure on the part of the United States to meet its obligations.

FALL OF PASIG.

Gen. Otis' Cablegram on Yesterday's Movements.

Washington, March 16.—The cablegram from Gen. Otis, received at the war department, was as follows:

"Until yesterday field operations here since the capturing of Calocan were of minor nature, consisting of driving back small bands of insurgents with considerable loss to the latter. Yesterday Gen. Wheaton attacked a large force of the enemy, drove them back and took line of the Pasig river, which he now holds. Two improvised gunboats in the lake have captured considerable property. Insurgent loss heavy. Our killed and wounded aggregated thirty-five, mostly slightly wounded. OCS."

THEIR LINE CUT.

Americans Drive the Natives Before Them.

Manila, March 16.—Brig. Gen. Wheaton's column advanced beyond Pasig to the shores of Laguna de Bay, sweeping everything before it. The enemy made a running fight and suffered severe loss. The natives' avenue of communication north and south is now closed, the American column stretching over a mile from the river to the lake. Two of yesterday's wounded are dead. They are Privates Munson and Stewart of the Twentieth and Twenty-second regiments.

An application has been made by S. L. Hutchins, John E. Patton and other leading colored citizens of Chattanooga, Tenn., for a charter for the National American Colonization Association, the object being to organize branches in the southern states. The association is formed with a view to colonizing negroes in the west and securing from congress a concession to allow the colonies so formed the right of state government and representatives in congress, etc. The plan was organized by S. L. Hutchins, a negro lawyer, who has given the question of "What to do with the negro?" a great deal of study. Hutchins was a circuit judge in North Carolina during the reconstruction days, and it is said of him that he came nearer to giving satisfaction to the whites in his circuit than any negro who ever held a like office. Hutchins gives a reason for his proposed colony that "the people of the United States should be given an opportunity to see whether the negro is capable of governing and holding office." The application for charter says that "it is not fair to judge of the negro's ability to conduct public affairs, to judge him by the failures he has made in office in the south. Given an opportunity when they are altogether dependent upon themselves, the negro will solve the question speedily as to whether he is worthy of citizenship and to be an integral part of the governing people." Hutchins claims that a number of the leading negroes of the south are in sympathy with him in the movement.

GEN. WHEATON TAKES PASIG

FILIPINOS GETTING A TASTE OF REAL WARFARE.

The City of Pasig, Near Manila, Attacked and Captured by the American Forces After an Hour's Fighting—Rebels Were Unable to Stand Up Against the Determined Onslaught of Gen. Wheaton's Men—Thirty Filipinos Killed and Sixteen Taken Prisoners—The American Loss Is Three Killed and Fourteen Wounded.

Manila, March 15. — Gen. Wheaton attacked and captured the city of Pasig, east of Manila, yesterday afternoon. The enemy made a stand for an hour, but at the end of that time were forced to retreat. The loss of the Filipinos was thirty killed and sixteen prisoners. Of the United States forces six were wounded.

At daylight Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton's divisional brigade, consisting of the Twentieth United States infantry, the Twenty-second infantry, eight companies of the Washington volunteers, seven companies of the Oregon volunteers, three troops of the Fourth United States cavalry and a mounted battery of the Sixth artillery, was drawn up on a ridge behind San Pedro Macati, a mile south of town. The advance was sounded at 6:30 a. m., the cavalry leading the column at a smart trot across the open to the right, eventually reaching a clump commanding the rear of Guadalupe. Supported by the Oregon volunteers, the advance force opened a heavy fire on the natives. The response was feeble and desultory, apparently coming from handfuls of men in every covert. While the right column was swinging toward the town of Pasig, they advanced, pouring volleys into the brush. The small body of rebels made a determined stand at Guadalupe church, but the enemy was unable to stand the assault. At 7:30 a. m. a river gunboat started toward Pasig. The rebels were first encountered by this vessel in the jungle near Guadalupe. Steaming slowly, the gunboat from her Gatling guns into the brush. For all of an hour the whizzing of the rapid-fire guns alternated with the booming of the heavier pieces on board. In the meantime Scott's battery on shore was shelling the trenches and driving the enemy back. The artillery then advanced to the ridge of bamboo and drove a few of the enemy's sharpshooters away with volleys from the carbines. The artillery then advanced and met with little opposition. In the meantime the infantry had been sent forward in extended order, the Washington regiment resting on the bank of the river, each regiment deploying on reaching its station, furnishing its own supports. The entire column then wheeled toward the river, driving the enemy toward his supports, and then advanced on Guadalupe. The artillery moved to a ridge commanding Pasig and Pateros. By this time the enemy was in sullen flight along a line over a mile long and the firing was discontinued temporarily in order to give the troops a rest before making an attack on Pasig. The enemy's losses were believed to be severe. After a short rest Gen. Wheaton resumed the attack on Pasig. Scott's battery, supported by two companies of the Twentieth regiment, advanced on Guadalupe by the road along the river bank, the remainder of the Twentieth regiment and the Twenty-second regiment following the reserve of the Oregon volunteers. At 11:30 a. m. the column came in contact with the enemy and a gunboat steamed to the firing line and on both sides, while the battery took up a position on a bluff at the right. The first shot from the American field pieces at 1:30 yards range dislodged a gun of the enemy at Pasig. After the town had been shelled the Twentieth regiment lined up on the bluff and the Twenty-second took up a position on the left of the place, with the cavalry in the center, whereupon the enemy retreated to the town. The gunboat then moved into a bend opposite and a hot fire on the rebel position was maintained along the whole American line until 2:20 p. m., when preparations were made for the attack. At 3 p. m. our gunboat started in pursuit of the enemy's armed tug, chasing her to the lake. At 3:30 a large body of the enemy was discovered working around our right flank and the Twentieth was moved to a commanding ridge. The rebels were met opposite Pateros, but the enemy bolted. The whole American line bivouacked at 5 o'clock. About 700 rebels are supposed to be marching northward a few miles to the southwest.

THAT'S WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH PASIG

That's What's the Matter With the Cuban Assembly.

Havana, March 16. — Gen. Gomez says he recognizes only one power in the island—that of the United States. All that the Cubans can do he declares is by permission of the American authorities, and therefore the military assembly can only talk. In his opinion the assembly is acting as it does because it wants to get more money out of the United States. In this connection he points out that the assembly first proposed to ask for $80,000,000. As for himself, he avers that he is not a beggar. The United States government offered the $3,000,000 and he has never asked an increase in the gift. Indeed, he says to ask more would be ungrateful and improper. To all callers Gen. Gomez speaks lightly of the assembly, declaring that it was his creation, as he did not wish to appear a dictator, and that the real military members who took no part in the vote to depose him will now resign. He calls the assembly "a collection of black clouds with much thunder, but little rain."

He did not communicate with Gen. Brooke yesterday, but will confer fully to-day.
The military assembly met in the afternoon with the usual guard. Most of the time was occupied in discussing the pronouncement which is to be issued with a view of justifying last Saturday's action in the eyes of the people.
Gen. Sanguilly introduced a resolution protesting against the acceptance of the $3,000,000, preceding it with a long preamble declaring the assembly was

Ready to Co-operate
with the United States in maintaining order in Cuba. The motion called for the adoption of resolutions in the name of the armed people of Cuba. The first extended the thanks of the assembly to the United States for aid during the recent war. The second thanked the United States for the offer of $3,000,000, but went on to assert that, "owing to the assembly's exact knowledge of the needs of the Cuban soldiers, its members consider it their duty to declare the amount insufficient."

"We cannot honorably accept it as a gift, but only as a loan," the resolution proceeded, "as President McKinley's authorization is necessary to raise funds needed to accomplish the disarming of the Cuban troops and exclusively used for that purpose."
The third resolution appointed a committee of three to present these resolutions to President McKinley.
Gen. Sanguilly's motion was carried by 18 votes against 4.
The "document of justification" was then read. It is very long and cites cases to show the disobedience of Gen. Gomez to the assembly, declaring that those familiar with the inner history of the war know that strained relations always existed between him and the Cuban civil authority.

Washington, March 16.—Senor Quesada has received a cable message from Santiago which says:

Senor Quesada was criticised by the Cuban assembly for his action in assisting a negotiation with Gen. Gomez for payment of $3,000,000 to the Cuban army.

Dissolve the Assembly.
Havana, March 16.—A rumor is in circulation that the Washington government will dissolve the assembly. It is published in an extra edition of La Discusion. The suggestion has frequently been made to Gen. Brooke to take such a course, but up to this time he has formed no such intention.

PASIG BURNED BY THE REBELS

THE ENEMY PUTS THE TORCH TO THE TOWN.

Insurgents Encountered in Such Force Beyond Pasig as to Necessitate a Change in Gen. Wheaton's Plans—Cavalry Attack a Rebel Stronghold, Driving the Enemy Out—Several Sharp Engagements in Which the Rebels Are Driven Back—Natives' Avenue of Communication Now Closed—Gen. Otis Reports.

Manila, March 16. — Late yesterday Gen. Wheaton's column encountered the enemy in such force between Pateros and Taguig as to necessitate a change in the original plans. The cavalry attacked a rebel stronghold in the jungle, driving the enemy into Pateros. The Americans had one man killed and three wounded. Scott's battery shelled the city and woods effectively. Later the enemy crossed the river from Pasig. Two companies of the Second Oregon infantry cleared the right bank after a sharp engagement and then retired with three wounded. In the meantime the Washington volunteers closed in, driving small bodies of the rebels back upon Pateros. One man was killed. During the night the enemy burned the town of Pasig.

Later—Gen. Wheaton's brigade continues the work of clearing out the rebels around Pasig. The Washington volunteers have captured and burned Pateros, meeting with a sharp fire from the enemy while crossing the river. To-day's fighting was like that of the past week, the insurgents occasionally making a stand, but eventually fleeing. Their loss is supposed to have been small as the Americans were unable to see the enemy in the thickets. The progress of the advance is slow.

OTIS WILL BE SUSTAINED.

In Forbidding Negotiations Between Spaniards and Insurgents.

Washington, March 16.—Gen. Otis, in forbidding further negotiations between the Spanish at Manila and the insurgents touching the surrender of the Spanish prisoners held by the latter, acted upon his own authority. The government has not sent him any instructions upon this point, but it will unquestionably support him to the extreme in any action of that kind he may take. It is said at the state department that there have been some exchanges between the United States and Spain through indirect channels touching these particular prisoners dating back to the signature of the protocol last August. The United States government undertook finally to secure the release of the prisoners. It never contemplated trying to secure their release by ransom, but simply through the suppression of the insurrection, and cannot be held by any requirement of international law to do more than has been done to secure the release of the prisoners. There will be no relaxation of the efforts in this direction, but, as the United States campaign in the Philippines is being conducted with all the energy possible and as the release of the prisoners depends upon the issue of that campaign there can be no complaint of failure on the part of the United States to meet its obligations.

FALL OF PASIG.

Gen. Otis' Cablegram on Yesterday's Movements.

Washington, March 16.—The cablegram from Gen. Otis, received at the war department, was as follows:
"Until yesterday field operations here since the capturing of Calocan were of minor nature, consisting of driving back small bands of insurgents with considerable loss to the latter. Yesterday Gen. Wheaton attacked a large force of the enemy, drove them back and took line of the Pasig river, which he now holds. Two improvised gunboats in the lake have captured considerable property. Insurgent loss heavy. Our killed and wounded aggregated thirty-five, mostly slightly wounded."
O.C.

THEIR LINE CUT.

Americans Drive the Natives Before Them.

Manila, March 16. — Brig. Gen. Wheaton's column advanced beyond Pasig to the shores of Laguna de Bay, sweeping everything before it. The enemy made a running fight and suffered severe loss. The natives' avenue of communication north and south is now closed. The American column stretching over a mile from the river to the lake. Two of yesterday's wounded are dead. They are Privates Munson and Stewart of the Twentieth and Twenty-second regiments.

COST OF THE WAR WITH SPAIN

ACCOUNT CHARGED UP WITH $482,562.083.

Chairman Cannon, of the Appropriations Committee, makes a statement of the Appropriations Made by the Fifty-Fifth Congress—Places the Total for the Entire Congress at $1,566,990,016—Appropriations Authorized for Future Congresses Under the Continuing Contract System, $70,000,000—Increase Over Last Congress.

Washington, March 12.—Availing himself of the privilege accorded by the house of representatives previous to adjournment, Chairman Cannon, of the committee on appropriations, has prepared for the Congressional Record a more extended statement of the appropriations made by the Fifty-fifth congress than he made the day after adjournment. He places the total appropriations for the entire congress at $1,566,990,016, and the appropriations authorized for future congresses under the continuing contract system for battleships, river and harbor improvements and public buildings at $70,000,000. The total appropriations made at the last session Mr. Cannon places at $673,658,400, showing an apparent reduction of $219,573,214 below the appropriations of the preceding session. Mr. Cannon attributes this reduction to the extraordinary war expenses of the preceding session. Of the total appropriations for the congress he says that the sum of $482,562,083 is directly chargeable to the war with Spain. He thus shows that the ordinary expenditures for the two years covered by the congress were $1,044,580,273, and this sum exceeds the total appropriations of the Fifty-fourth congress by $39,746,658. This excess is accounted for as follows:

For payment of pensions, $3,875,200; for the postal service, to meet increased demands of commerce, $16,619,581; for river and harbor improvements, $3,401,128; for constructing new ships, $6,080,838; for beginning the work of the twelfth census, $1,000,000; for the Paris exposition, $1,210,000; for new public buildings, $5,000,000; for payment of judgments against the government under the Bowman act, and for the French spoliation claims, $3,100,708. Total, $40,287,516. Mr. Cannon congratulates congress and the country upon this showing and also upon the fact that, notwithstanding the war, close attention was given to the ordinary expenditures of the government, which is, he thinks, unusual.

ADMIRAL KAUTZ'S MISSION.

He Goes to Samoa to Fulfill a Treaty Obligation.

Washington, March 12.—It is denied positively at the state department that Rear Admiral Kautz has gone to Samoa on the Philadelphia to restore the status quo existing before the last mutiny, to depose Mataafa and restore Malletta Tanus even if force is necessary to accomplish these objects. It is said that the admiral has gone to Samoa to meet the treaty obligations that is imposed upon the United States to send a warship there at least occasionally as an evidence of the interest held by the United States in the islands. While there he will make a careful examination of the conditions on the islands and look into the events leading up to the restoration of the provisional government, reporting all the facts to Washington. It is not expected that he will be a disturbing element and endeavor to make arbitrary changes, but only prevent bloodshed and protect life and property.

SEE HOW IT'S DONE.

Court of Inquiry Inspects Packing Houses at Chicago.

Chicago, March 12.—The court of inquiry resumed its work regarding beef yesterday by continuing the investigation of processes of preparation at the stockyards. Several more of the packing houses were inspected, most of the time being spent in examining the methods of one of the companies which deals exclusively in canned goods. The various stages from the killing of beef to the labelling of the cans were witnessed. After seeing an animal killed the court followed the carcass to the refrigerator rooms and from there to the department where the meat was cut into the proper size for canning. Much information was obtained as to the character of the meat used for canning purposes. Gen. Davis was the chief inquisitor, the other members of the court being content to simply watch the various processes.

FLOODS AND WASHOUTS.

Southern Minnesota Towns Suffer Severely.

Preston, Minn., March 15.—Saturday night Preston witnessed the highest water mark for more than twenty-five years. It thawed all day, and about 5 o'clock it commenced to rain and continued raining until about 2 a. m., when it turned colder and commenced snowing. All the south and east part of town was under water and much damage was done. An ice dam was formed above the Conkey mill dam, and when it broke the large cakes of ice, some 20x30 feet and three feet thick, were carried all over the flats. The streets south of main street are filled with ice. The mill dam east of town is greatly damaged and many wagon bridges washed away. The iron bridge crossing Root river on the east of Preston is greatly damaged, the east abutment being entirely gone. The greatest damage done is to Collins' lumber yard. The water stood three feet deep all over the yard. A great deal of lumber was washed into the channel of the river and onto away. Many families were moved to higher quarters, and many business men were obliged to stay up town all night on account of not being able to cross the river. The turntable was thrown out of its pit and no engines can be turned for some time.

Laneshoro, Minn., March 15.—The worst freshet for years occurred here Saturday night. Telegraph and telephone wires are down, and the wagon bridge opposite the railway water tank dam and part of the railway bridge east have gone down. The railway west of town is covered with heavy blocks of ice.

VOLUNTEERS LET OUT.

Those in Cuba Will Be Brought Home and Mustered Out.

Washington, March 15.—The war department has determined to muster out and bring home all the volunteers in Cuba with the exception of the volunteer engineers and immunes. The necessity for immediate action has been brought to the attention of the war department on account of the quarantine regulations against Cuba which goes into effect about May 1, and which are especially strict at all Southern ports. When the troops are brought to this country they must, under the law be mustered out in camps, and they no doubt will be brought to camps nearest their homes. It is desired also to have them brought to places where fumigating can be done, and it is possible that troops for North Carolina may be brought to Montauk and Camp Wyckoff again be established, although the present intention is to have all Northern troops sent to Camp Meade, in Pennsylvania. The troops of North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana and Georgia will probably be brought to Savannah, the Texas troops to Galveston and the Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia troops to Old Point Comfort, Va.

IDENTIFIED BY GEN. WOOD.

Remains of Admiral Villamil Found Among the Rocks Near Santiago.

Santiago, Cuba, March 15.—Sunday Gen. Leonard Wood, military governor of the department of Santiago, in the presence of the adjutant general of the department, Col. Bacon and Capt. Gilmore, of Capt. Scott, captain of the port, and other officers, positively identified the remains of the Spanish officer discovered a few days ago among the rocks on the shore about four miles west of El Moro, as those of Admiral Villamil, who commanded the Spanish torpedo boat destroyers in the naval battle which resulted in the destruction of Admiral Cervera's squadron. Gen. Wood, through the war department, will notify the secretary of state of the finding of the remains, so that they can be removed to Spain, if the Spanish government so desires. Pending final disposition they will be kept at the arsenal here. The tattered uniform will also be held subject to Spain's wishes. The arm chair is at present in charge of Capt. Scott.

The crowd was dispersed by the police, and several arrests were made. The Norwegian papers condemn the demonstration.

SPAIN'S TRADE LAST YEAR.

Notwithstanding the War It Shows a Balance in Her Favor.

Washington, March 15.—United States Consular Agent Mertens, at Grao, has submitted to the state department some figures relative to the Spanish trade last year, showing the surprising fact that notwithstanding her completed defeat in war and her distressed economic conditions, Spain was actually able to show a balance of trade in her favor for 1908. Mr. Mertens cites this fact as a demonstration of the natural wealth of the country. The total exports were $162,401,038 and imports $91,772,450.

WAS NOT VILLAMEL.

Something Further About the Body Found Near Santiago.

Washington, March 16.—The secretary of the navy has received the following telegram from Portland, Or.: "The remains found in chair about four miles west of Santiago, as reported in today's papers, are not those of Villamil, but of Spanish seaman. Report follows by mail."

"Proctor, Assistant Engineer."

The officer from whom the above message was received was an engineer on board the Gloucester, which was the instrument that destroyed the Pluton, on board of which Admiral Villamil started from Santiago. He was in charge of the landing party which went to the succor of the Spanish sailors who managed to reach the shore from the sinking vessel and were being fired upon by the Cubans. While bringing the particular seaman down to the shore to take him aboard the Gloucester the seaman died and his remains were allowed to sit in the chair in which the body had been conveyed. The department officials believe that Villamil's body lies at the bottom of the sea.

Chicago, March 16.—Col. O. M. Smith, purchasing agent of the government at Chicago since 1895, testified yesterday before the government court of inquiry that the store and canned roast beef bought by him during the Spanish war were all upon the direct order of Gen. Egan, commissary general. He also stated some purchases of canned beef were made without his knowledge by the commissary general. One of yesterday's important witnesses was Gustav Swift, head of the packing house of Swift & Co. Good progress was made by the court, but the end of the list of witnesses to be examined in Chicago is not yet in sight.

DEWEY MAY RETURN.

Citizens of Washington Want Him at a Peace Festival in May.

Washington, March 16.—Admiral Dewey will be in Washington May 20, if the plans of a committee of prominent citizens here do not fail. An imposing delegation will wait upon the secretary of the navy and ask him to authorize the admiral to accept an invitation from the city of Washington to be the guest of honor at the peace festival to be held here the latter part of May. Secretary Long will refer the request of the citizens' committee to the president at Thomasville, and if he gives it his approval the committee is sanguine that Admiral Dewey will accept and arrive here in time.

RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS.

Washington, March 16.—Negotiations for reciprocity treaties with Germany and France have been resumed and there is still a prospect that a treaty may be negotiated with Great Britain covering the British West Indies. These several treaty negotiations were interrupted some months ago by the service Mr. Kasson, our reciprocity commissioner, was obliged to give to the Canadian commission. As this work is closed Mr. Kasson is free to resume the work with the other countries, and he has written to inform them that he is at liberty to proceed.

THE LEGISLATURE

Business Transacted by Minnesota Senate.

St. Paul, March 9.—By a majority that was simply crushing in its magnitude the house yesterday rejected the Grondahl bill providing for the care of the chronic insane by counties, and probably settled for all time to come the policy of the state in caring for the most unfortunate class of its wards. When the roll was called the bill received but 15 votes, while 91 members of the house recorded themselves in the negative.

The following bills were passed:

Authorizing the holding of the elections of townships in certain cases within the limits of certain villages, and the holding of township offices by electors of the village. — Increasing the compensation of the supreme court reporter. — Restoring the annual appropriation of $20,000 for support of the soldiers' home. — Providing for a boiler inspector for each congressional district. — Allowing townships to own property in incorporated villages for town hall purposes and to hold elections therein.

The following bills were introduced:

To regulate bicycle riding outside the limits of cities and villages. — Relating to consolidation of railroads. — Prohibiting the diminution of the term of office or the salary of any public officer during the term. — For the appointment of a mine inspector. — To provide for the care and treatment of crippled and deformed children. — To prescribe the duties of the deputy state treasurer.

The house spent a couple of hours in committee of the whole at the close of the afternoon session, Mr. Foss in the chair, devoting all the time to the Snyder bill for the creation in the three large cities of a teachers' retirement fund. The result was the defeat of the bill by a vote of 52 to 44.

The Senate.

The senate devoted most of its time yesterday to consideration of the measures relating to beet sugar bounty, insane hospitals and the proposition to place state fee officers on a salary basis.

The beet sugar industry received a severe setback by the passage of the Batz bill to repeal the law of 1895, under which a bounty of 1 cent a pound was offered for the manufacture of beet sugar, and again, in the slaughtering of the Knutvold bills of the present session which proposed the limitation of the bounty to $30,000 a year and its equal division between the manufacturer and the farmers that grow the beets.

The insane hospital question was easily disposed of. The senate seems to have made up its mind to let the house take the initiative in this matter, and yesterday afternoon when the several propositions of this nature that were made a special order for 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon was reached, the senate followed the lead of the house and postponed consideration of the measures until 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, March 16.

The proposition to put state fee officers on a salary basis was under discussion most of the forenoon. It was decided to investigate the reports of fee officers' earnings as recently made to the senate.

St. Paul, March 10.—Senator Thompson of Fillmore county yesterday introduced a measure embodying the so-called "colony plan" of caring for the state's insane, which is advocated by the superintendents and resident directors of the insane asylums of the state. The plan is proposed as a substitute for the county plan, and, also, for the so-called district proposition, which has in view the establishment of two more comparatively large institutions, one at Anoka and the other at Hastings. The Thompson bill provides for the construction of an equal number of detached cottages on each of the three large insane asylum sites at St. Peter, Rochester and Fergus Falls.

The following bills were introduced: notice in english cm cm cm cmv Relating to appeals from the decision of county commissioners in the matter of claims. — To prohibit the sale of prison-made goods without their being plainly marked. — To amend the statutes relating to the pay of county commissioners. — To amend the statutes so as to give county commissioners $3 a day compensation. — To regulate the incorporation and management of building and loan and savings associations.

The House.

The house decided yesterday in committee of the whole to report favorably on the bill prepared by Adjt. Gen. Lamert providing for the payment of the national guardsmen who were accepted as volunteers by the general government, at Camp Ramsey during April and May of last year, at the rate provided by the military code of the state for national guardsmen in actual service, for the period between the guard and the muster of the three regiments.

The following bills were introduced: To repeal chapter 393, Laws of 1897, relating to school bonds. — To amend section 27 and 48, chapter 22, Laws of 1892, as amended, defining a legal newspaper. — Relating to the taxation of insurance companies. — To appropriate $5,000 for 1899 and $7,000 annually thereafter for the use of the state dairy and food commission in enforcing the laws relating to the adulteration of foods. — To prevent the taking of fish from lakes within the limits of incorporated cities between Nov. 1 and March 1. — Relating to the composition, duties and membership of the state agricultural society. — To amend the laws relating to game and fish. — To construct three cottages for the insane and to appropriate money therefor.

St. Paul, March 11.—When the senate was called to order yesterday forenoon Senator Horton called up his concurrent resolution petitioning President McKinley to recall from the Philippines the Thirteenth Minnesota volunteer regiment, and it was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Considerable time was spent in committee of the whole and a number of bills were acted upon

The following bills were passed: To amend the laws relating to town elections and powers of supervisors.—To amend section 1050, Statutes of 1894, so as to allow a justice of the peace to hold his office in a different ward from that in which he is living; relates only to cities of between 2,000 and 15,000 population that are incorporated under the general statutes.

The following bills were introduced: To amend the Statutes of 1894 relating to limitation of the time of beginning actions.—To prevent the manufacture and sale of adulterated and unwholesome dairy products.

The House.

Three bills designed to straighten out the taxation at Duluth were recommended to pass. A large number of other bills were acted on in committee of the whole. None of them were of any great general interest.

The following bills were introduced: To prevent fraud in the sale of dairy products.—Directing the railroad and warehouse commission to investigate the reasonableness of certain rates.—To amend chapter 107, Laws of 1883, relating to trust companies.—To amend chapter 318, Laws of 1897, creating a board of state drainage commissioners.—To amend section 5, chapter 1, Session Laws of 1878, relating to exemptions from taxation.

St. Paul, March 13.—The house Saturday emphatically rejected the proposition contained in Mr. Staples' bill creating a legislative committee of five members to conduct an investigation during the recess into the conduct of the correctional and charitable institutions of this and other states, with a view to possible legislation in the direction of a state board of control.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for a revision of the list of delinquent road tax by road overseers before the same is returned to the town supervisors. — Providing for the payment of arrears of pay to the enlisted men of the national guard. — Providing for a Minnesota standard policy for mutual hail insurance companies. — Providing for judgment and costs, pending stay of execution, shall draw 7 per cent interest. — Making tax receipts, stubs, etc., prima facie evidence of taxes paid and by whom paid, in actions concerning rights to real property. — Providing for a second edition of 10,000 copies of the legislative manual. — Enlarging the powers of councils in villages of more than 3,000 inhabitants relative to the removal of snow, etc., from sidewalks.

The following bills were introduced: To amend section 3759, Statutes of 1894, relating to the apportionment of school funds. — Relating to apportionment of county school funds. — To provide for the punishment of persons from seven to sixteen years who commit a crime. — Relating to land titles. — Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — To allow territory to be detached from one school district and attached to another in certain cases.

veterinary medicine. — To authorize county commissioners to appropriate money for the erection of monuments in memory of Union soldiers. — Relating to garnishment proceedings; exempts $9 a week. — To enable city councils of a certain class to assess abutting property benefitted by local improvements.

The House.

The house spent most of the day in passing the bills which had accumulated on the calendar for several days preceding. There was a list of twenty-eight of them. Not all of them were passed.

The combination horse-bicycle-theft-bounty bill was amended by reducing the bicycle bounty from $25 to $15, but even in this form could not command quite a majority. The vote was 56 to 33, which defeated the bill. Mr. Donahue gave notice of a motion to reconsider. Later in the day Mr. Donahue's motion was adopted and the bill re-committed to the committee of the whole. The anti-boycott bill went through by a vote of 66 to 15.

Among the more important bills passed were the following:

Providing that the provisions of the Chattel Mortgage Law of 1897, with respect to notice of sale, etc., shall apply to all conditional sale contracts, seed grain, flens, etc. — Defining the duties of contractors with respect to mechanics' liens. — Relating to farmers' mutual fire insurance companies. — Providing for the organization of towns in certain cases. — Authorizing county commissioners to pay for services of physicians called in emergencies to treat county patients. — Prohibiting boycotting. — Providing for a maximum penalty of $250 or six months' imprisonment for witnesses failing to obey subpoena. — Providing that right of way for public roads or cartways over property owned by a ward in guardianship or by the estate of a deceased may be obtained as right of way of railroads is now obtained, — making the removal of a bicycle malicious mischief. — Allowing the owner of property sold for taxes to pay one year's delinquent taxes at a time. — Raising the age of consent from fourteen to sixteen years. — Providing that a person convicted of going to jail. — Authorizing courts to hold sessions outside of county seats for the purpose of naturalization. — Relating to the incorporation of religious societies.

The following bills were introduced: To amend section 3759, Statutes of 1894, relating to the apportionment of school funds. — Relating to apportionment of county school funds. — To provide for the punishment of persons from seven to sixteen years who commit a crime. — Relating to land titles. — Relating to the assessment and collection of taxes. — To allow territory to be detached from one school district and attached to another in certain cases.

INDIANS ARE VERY RESTLESS.

Trouble Fanned at the White Rock Agency.

Price, Utah, March 16.—Reports from White Rocks agency are to the effect that the Indian leaders there are very restless and trouble is anticipated by Indian Agent Myton by reason of the failure of the government to pay the Indians for Colorado lands. The matter was presented to Agent Myton by the head men of the White River Utes some ten days ago and the agent referred the matter to Washington. Nothing has been heard from the interior department and in consequence the Indians are becoming restless, and it is said threaten all manner of things. The Indians behind the agitation are old men and were more or less identified with the Meeker massacre. This fact caused some alarm, and by White Agent Myron's return to White Rocks by special conveyance from Price, where he was called by Salt Lake, lends color to the reports that an outbreak may occur at any time. The Indians are in an ugly mood and say if Washington does not pay them for their lands in Colorado they propose going back on them.

THE boys are "wearing of the green" today.

The ground hog will kindly remember that he was sent back for only six weeks, and they have expired.

The Cuban assembly has deposed Gomez as commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, and now the people threaten to depose the assembly.

The Delaware legislature adjourned without electing a senator, and the state will be represented by only one senator for two years. Considering the size of the state one senator is enough.

The American troops in the Philippines have begun active operations against the insurgents and are driving them inland like sheep. Nothing can stand before the valor of the boys in blue.

The French government has just ordered ten locomotives from the Baldwin works at Philadelphia for state railways. It looks as if America will shortly be furnishing iron and steel machinery for the world.

The farmers in the county don't seem to respond to the county fair project as they should. They should be more anxious for a good county fair than the town people, as they will receive the most benefit.

The daily papers are now trying to prove that St. Patrick was a Frenchman, that he knew nothing of "wearing of the green," and that he never even saw shamrock. The Irish seem to have no rights the yellow journals are bound to respect.

CENSUS DIRECTOR MERRIAM will appoint ex-Labor Commissioner Powers, of this state, to an important position in the census bureau. If all census appointments are equally meritorious, the coming census will be a model. Mr. Powers, as a statistician, has no superior.

COUNTY ATTORNEY S. F. ALDERMAN must be more than satisfied with his success at this term of court. He won every criminal case that he prosecuted and in which an indictment was secured. This is a record as county attorney which has never been equalled in this county, and fully justifies the confidence the people of the county reposed in him when they elected him last fall by four votes to one for his opponent.

THE Arena says John Lind has been governor two months and none of the bad things predicted of populist success have materialized. Grover Cleveland was president four years his first term and none of the bad things predicted of free trade occurred, simply because congress was republican or anti-free trade, but when Mr. Cleveland was elected his second term and also a free trade congress, the country suffered all the evil things that were predicted and more, and it is equally true of Mr. Lind and his crazy populist notions. As long as the state has a republican legislative body, Mr. Lind will be unable to inflict any of his absurd theories on the public, and the state will prosper. But a complete populist administration would produce all the woes suffered by Kansas and other populist communities in the past.

Comparison and Contrast.

Two years ago William McKinley entered on his duties as president of the United States, and the contrast between the present conditions and those which existed during the last two years of the preceding democratic administration comes to every thinking American citizen with great force, says the St. Cloud Journal-Press. It presents all the difference between adversity and prosperity, between want and plenty, between idleness and activity, between wretchedness and happiness. Then mills and factories were closed and men were without employment or if any had work it was at greatly reduced wages; now every form of industry shows the greatest activity, labor is in demand and wages are steadily advancing. Then the building of railroads and other large works of improvement had ceased; now new lines and additional branches are being constructed in nearly all the states, giving steady employment to armies of men. Then money was in hiding, and scarcely any rate of interest was high enough to tempt it forth; now the market is glutted with money and rates of interest were never so low. Then bonds had to be issued, not only once, but again and again, with which to provide gold to redeem the obligations of the government; now the surplus of gold, brought to the treasury in the ordinary course of business, is far in excess of all demands. Then there was an all-pervading feeling of distrust, of uncertainty, of apprehension; now the very air seems to palpitate with the feeling of buoyance which permeates all localities and all classes. Then the country was under the depressing influence of the Wilson bill, which was so long on promise and so short on performance; now it has the Dingley bill, which protects American industries and insures to American labor its proper reward. Then the country was threatened with the free coinage of silver at the Bryanistic ratio of 16 to 1, the very possibility of which paralyzed every fibre of commerce; now the financial policy of the government is based on a single gold standard, which gives confidence to capital and maintains the full value of the income of labor.

Let any intelligent man, from his own knowledge of the conditions then and now, carry out these comparisons and draw his own deductions. The difference is the direct and immediate result of opposing governmental policies. The one is the popocratic, free trade, free silver policy; the other in the republican, protection to American industry, gold standard policy. The one would mean for the future as it brought in the past, idleness, want, disaster; the other means for the future as it has brought for the present, activity, plenty, prosperity. There is no heated campaign on now, and it is a good time for men who want to vote intelligently and wisely when the time comes, to do some quiet thinking.

LOCAL EVIDENCE.

One Line of It Is Worth a Column of Foreign Testimony.

Make a mental note of this. The endorser is well known in Brainerd. His veracity is unquestioned. You are reading local evidence. Investigating home testimony. Brainerd news for Brainerd people. It is not from Florida or Maine. Suspicion can't lurk around it. Honesty is its prominent characteristic. Home endorsement its salient point. Mr. R. D. Ransom, of Third Ave., East Brainerd, fireman at the Brainerd Lumber Co., says: "I can only speak of Doan's Kidney Pills as I found them. They certainly did me a wonderful sight of good. For as long as twelve or fourteen years I was a sufferer from kidney ailment. My back hurt me awful; I could stoop, but when I attempted to rise up severe pain caught me in the loins. Often in bed I could not change my position, and when morning came I had to be helped out of bed. The kidney secretions were of a very unhealthy color and were otherwise irregular. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills which my son-in-law brought me early in the spring. I began using them carefully, and that box did me so much good I took another. The result was simply this, my back has not troubled me the least bit since. The effect upon the kidneys has been shown by the change in color, etc., which was brought about by the kidney secretions. I ascribe this happy result to Doan's Kidney Pills, for I took nothing else. I believe that others will experience just as radical a change as I did from their use." Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute. For sale by the McPadden Drug Co., and Johnson's Pharmacy.

FRIDAY, MARCH 17, 1899.

THE boys are "wearing of the green" today.

THE ground hog will kindly remember that he was sent back for only six weeks, and they have expired.

THE Cuban assembly has deposed Gomez as commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, and now the people threaten to depose the assembly.

THE Delaware legislature adjourned without electing a senator, and the state will be represented by only one senator for two years. Considering the size of the state one senator is enough.

THE American troops in the Philippines have begun active operations against the insurgents and are driving them inland like sheep. Nothing can stand before the valor of the boys in blue.

THE French government has just ordered ten locomotives from the Baldwin works at Philadelphia for state railways. It looks as if America will shortly be furnishing iron and steel machinery for the world.

THE farmers in the county don't seem to respond to the county fair project as they should. They should be more anxious for a good county fair than the town people, as they will receive the most benefit.

THE daily papers are now trying to prove that St. Patrick was a Frenchman, that he knew nothing of "wearing of the green," and that he never even saw shamrock. The Irish seem to have no rights the yellow journals are bound to respect.

CENSUS DIRECTOR MERRIAM will appoint ex-Labor Commissioner Powers, of this state, to an important position in the census bureau. If all census appointments are equally meritorious, the coming census will be a model. Mr. Powers, as a statistician, has no superior.

COUNTY ATTORNEY S. F. ALDERMAN must be more than satisfied with his success at this term of court. He won every criminal case that he prosecuted and in which an indictment was secured. This is a record as county attorney which has never been equalled in this county, and fully justifies the confidence the people of the county reposed in him when they elected him last fall by four votes to one for his opponent.

THE Arena says John Lind has been governor two months and none of the bad things predicted of populist success have materialized. Grover Cleveland was president four years his first term and none of the bad things predicted of free trade occurred, simply because congress was republican or anti-free trade, but when Mr. Cleveland was elected his second term and also a free trade congress, the country suffered all the evil things that were predicted and more, and it is equally true of Mr. Lind and his crazy populist notions. As long as the state has a republican legislative body, Mr. Lind will be unable to inflict any of his absurd theories on the public, and the state will prosper. But a complete populist administration would produce all the woes suffered by Kansas and other populist communities in the past.

Comparison and Contrast.

Two years ago William McKinley entered on his duties as president of the United States, and the contrast between the present conditions and those which existed during the last two years of the preceding democratic administration comes to every thinking American citizen with great force, says the St. Cloud Journal-Press. It presents all the difference between adversity and prosperity, between want and plenty, between idleness and activity, between wretchedness and happiness. Then mills and factories were closed and men were without employment or if any had work it was at greatly reduced wages; now every form of industry shows the greatest activity, labor is in demand and wages are steadily advancing. Then the building of railroads and other large works of improvement had ceased; now new lines and additional branches are being constructed in nearly all the states, giving steady employment to armies of men. Then money was in hiding, and scarcely any rate of interest was high enough to tempt it forth; now the market is glutted with money and rates of interest were never so low. Then bonds had to be issued, not only once, but again and again, with which to provide gold to redeem the obligations of the government; now the surplus of gold, brought to the treasury in the ordinary course of business, is far in excess of all demands. Then there was an all-pervading feeling of distrust, of uncertainty, of apprehension; now the very air seems to palpitate with the feeling of buoyance which permeates all localities and all classes. Then the country was under the depressing influence of the Wilson bill, which was so long on promise and so short on performance; now it has the Dingley bill, which protects American industries and insures to American labor its proper reward. Then the country was threatened with the free coinage of silver at the Bryanistic ratio of 16 to 1, the very possibility of which paralyzed every fibre of commerce; now the financial policy of the government is based on a single gold standard, which gives confidence to capital and maintains the full value of the income of labor.

Let any intelligent man, from his own knowledge of the conditions then and now, carry out these comparisons and draw his own deductions. The difference is the direct and immediate result of opposing governmental policies. The one is the popocratic, free trade, free silver policy; the other in the republican, protection to American industry, gold standard policy. The one would mean for the future as it brought in the past, idleness, want, disaster; the other means for the future as it has brought for the present, activity, plenty, prosperity. There is no heated campaign on now, and it is a good time for men who want to vote intelligently and wisely when the time comes, to do some quiet thinking.

LOCAL EVIDENCE.

One Line of It Is Worth a Column of Foreign Testimony.

Make a mental note of this. The endorser is well known in Brainerd. His veracity is unquestioned. You are reading local evidence. Investigating home testimony. Brainerd news for Brainerd people. It is not from Florida or Maine. Suspicion can't lurk around it. Honesty is its prominent characteristic. Home endorsement its salient point.

Mr. R. D. Ransom, of Third Ave., East Brainerd, fireman at the Brainerd Lumber Co., says: "I can only speak of Doan's Kidney Pills as I found them. They certainly did me a wonderful sight of good. For as long as twelve or fourteen years I was a sufferer from kidney ailment. My back hurt me awful; I could stoop, but when I attempted to rise up severe pain caught me in the loins. Often in bed I could not change my position, and when morning came I had to be helped out of bed. The kidney secretions were of a very unhealthy color and were otherwise irregular. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills which my son-in-law brought me early in the spring. I began using them carefully, and that box did me so much good I took another. The result was simply this, my back has not troubled me the least bit since. The effect upon the kidneys has been shown by the change in color, etc., which was brought about by the kidney secretions. I ascribe this happy result to Doan's Kidney Pills, for I took nothing else. I believe that others will experience just as radical a change as I did from their use."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute. For sale by the McFadden Drug Co., and Johnson's Pharmacy.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Items of Interest in Neighboring Towns Gleaned from Exchanges and from Special Correspondents.

The Wadena Journal says that ties have been twice found on the Northern Pacific tracks one mile below Becker station, but were removed in time to prevent accidents. An investigation is being held.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ittis came up from Brainerd Saturday night to visit with Mr. and Mrs. R. F. C. Ittis. Mr. Ittis left Sunday evening for Cavalier, N. D., where he is going into the drug business, and his wife will remain in the city for a couple or three weeks, when she will follow him.—Wadena Pioneer.

KLONDIKE NUGGETS.

W. S. Hanks has the la grippe. Christ Wilson has been on the sick list during the past week.

G. A. Hunt has been seriously ill at Minneapolis, and is not yet able to return home.

One of the teamsters lost a good horse last week at the "landing" by slipping down the hill under the load of logs.

G. W. Scott was summoned to his home at Elk River by a telegram announcing his daughter had met with an accident and had broken a rib.

There are many inquiring for land in this vicinity. There is not a better piece of garden ground in Crow Wing county where you can raise apples, grapes, raspberries, strawberries, currants, etc., equal to any in the state.

DEERWOOD NEWS.

The town election was a quiet affair. All the old officers were re-elected. John E. Horing, roadmaster on the Fergus Falls branch, was a Deerwood visitor last Sunday.

Invitations are out for a basket social in the Methodist church next Friday evening. Music and song will be the program for the evening.

There is a rumor that a hideous crime has been committed in the east part of the town. If it proves true we hope justice will be meted out to the guilty ones.

Mr. Coombs, father of Mrs. D. E. Whitten, was taken suddenly ill last Monday. Dr. Kelley, of Aitkin, was sent for and pronounced it heart failure, and he died Friday morning. The funeral took place on Sunday at the Methodist church, and the remains were laid to rest in the Scandia cemetery. Mr. Coombs came here last fall from Idaho, and has made his home here with his daughter, Mrs. Whitten, up to his death. He was 83 years old.

Fake Piano Sales.

What a piano salesman says of his own instruments: In order to do business with the American public, we have to resort to fake and humbug.

The W. W. Kimball Co. stands alone unsurpassed, defying the whole world for superiority over all other makes, receiving highest honors at the world's fair in 1893, receiving a gold medal at the Omaha Exposition 1898, endorsed by all the leading musicians of Brainerd and the world at large, what more are you looking for, and you are sure to get a square deal on monthly payments, with Fourteen Trains Each Day.

That is what it means. On and after March 12th, 1899, the Northern Pacific Railway will start two trains each day flying westward from its eastern terminals. At the same time—not at exactly the same hours—two trains will also leave its western terminals from the east. There will then be, each day, moving over the 2000 miles of main track between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth at the east, and Seattle, Tacoma and Portland on the Pacific Coast, fourteen of these trains—in both directions—going at the same time and this in a country where 20 years ago the buffalo were roaming. These trains will be known as No. 1, the Puget Sound Limited, No. 3, the Oregon Limited, going west, and No. 2, the Twin City Mail, No. 4, the Twin City Express, going east, and will contain in the aggregate more than 100 cars of various sorts. Each train will have a mail car, a baggage car, first and second class coaches, a Free Colonist Sleeping car, a Pullman Tourist Sleeping car, a Dining car, and one or more Pullman First Class Sleeping cars, so that everybody's pocketbook can be accommodated. The Dining cars are a part of the solid through trains and no one need therefore go hungry.

Train No. 1 will leave St. Paul at 8:55 a. m.; train No. 3 at 10:45 p. m., after all trains have arrived from the east and south, morning and evening. Train No. 2 will leave Portland at 11:30 a. m., and train No. 4 at 11:00 p. m., arriving at St. Paul 2:00 p. m. and 7:30 a. m., respectively, in time for all departing trains eastward. One train goes via Helena, Mont., and one via Butte, in each direction. These trains run through the most important cities of the northwest and are hauled by new and enormous Schenectady locomotives, making, when necessary, 75 or 80 miles an hour.

These diurnal trains will amply accommodate the large immigration and tourist travel that seems probable this year.

Fourteen Trains Each Day.

That is what it means. On and after March 12th, 1899, the Northern Pacific Railway will start two trains each day flying westward from its eastern terminals. At the same time—not at exactly the same hours—two trains will also leave its western terminals from the east. There will then be, each day, moving over the 2000 miles of main track between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth at the east, and Seattle, Tacoma and Portland on the Pacific Coast, fourteen of these trains—in both directions—going at the same time and this in a country where 20 years ago the buffalo were roaming. These trains will be known as No. 1, the Puget Sound Limited, No. 3, the Oregon Limited, going west, and No. 2, the Twin City Mail, No. 4, the Twin City Express, going east, and will contain in the aggregate more than 100 cars of various sorts. Each train will have a mail car, a baggage car, first and second class coaches, a Free Colonist Sleeping car, a Pullman Tourist Sleeping car, a Dining car, and one or more Pullman First Class Sleeping cars, so that everybody's pocketbook can be accommodated. The Dining cars are a part of the solid through trains and no one need therefore go hungry.

Train No. 1 will leave St. Paul at 8:55 a. m.; train No. 3 at 10:45 p. m., after all trains have arrived from the east and south, morning and evening. Train No. 2 will leave Portland at 11:30 a. m., and train No. 4 at 11:00 p. m., arriving at St. Paul 2:00 p. m. and 7:30 a. m., respectively, in time for all departing trains eastward. One train goes via Helena, Mont., and one via Butte, in each direction. These trains run through the most important cities of the northwest and are hauled by new and enormous Schenectady locomotives, making, when necessary, 75 or 80 miles an hour.

THE RIGHTFUL HEIR

By M. T. CALDOR.

He who had named himself Bernard watched her with feverish eyes.

"And what shall I do with it?" asked she, as she folded the narrow slip of paper.

"Ah, if I could help it—believe me, I would rather cut off my right hand than ask it of you, but it is for the sake of another—better, purer than I. I must implore you to carry it yourself to the foot of the great Craig that overhangs the river, at the end of the chestnut woods, in the evening. Will you, dare you do it, Lady Violante? when I assure you no earthly harm can come of it to you; and much, very much anxiety may be spared me, and another who is very dear to me."

Lady Violante drew a long breath, but said firmly: "Certainly, I will do it, why do you doubt it? I have often strayed as far, with only a servant in attendance."

"Ah, yes, but there must be no servant near to see or suspect anything. You must promise no living thing shall see that, hear a word of this conversation, or know aught that may be hereafter connected with the cliff in your mind."

"The mystery was growing startling! Lady Violante's cheek blanched, and for the first time she hesitated.

"Ah!" said he, bitterly, while his glittering eye followed the changes of her face. "I knew it would be so—you promised to trust me, but you are already doubting me, and are ready to retreat."

"No, no!" exclaimed she, impulsively—"I will not retreat, I will do all you ask of me."

"And no one—not even your father—most of all, Count Germain, your lover, shall know what I have said to you?" asked he, eagerly.

"No one," repeated she, firmly. "I take your assurance, that there is nothing in the transaction to compromise my character or station, and I pass over your allusion to a lover, where there is no such relation. Now tell me what else there is for me to know."

He had closed his eyes wearily, and his lips writhed with a spasm of pain.

"The pity again overpowered reserve—"You are ill, you are suffering, oh, that I could aid you, could bear half the suffering myself. Shall I call Julie?"

"No, no," said he, hurriedly, "let me be assured the note has reached its place, I shall be easier at once. You have but to fasten it to the bough of the lopped larch tree, the only one there, first being sure no one is near, give a low blast on this whistle three times, and then you may return as speedily as you please. My errand will be performed."

He disengaged an ivory whistle from a chain around his neck, and held it toward her.

She received it with a gentle assuring smile, adding:

"Have no fears. I will find means to obey your injunction to the letter."

"Heaven bless you!" said he, turning his face to the pillow to hide its agitation.

And Lady Violante glided softly from the room.

Early the next morning she came again, and taking advantage of the momentary absence of the attendant, she laid the whistle on his pillow, saying quietly:

"I have performed your first task; now show your gratitude by growing more cheerful, and settling me another."

He looked up anxiously.

"And no one saw you? you are sure of that?"

"Quite certain. Moreover, I took an early ride that way this morning, and the note was gone."

He drew a long breath of relief. A smile, so rarely beautiful it almost startled her, lit up his pallid face, and with a soft sigh, he whispered:

"Now I am ready to obey my nurse, and rest."

CHAPTER II.

IX weeks had elapsed since Beauvais Chateau had sheltered the stranger, who had rescued his helpless from a terrible death. Still he was as much a stranger to the Count and all the household as at first, and was only known as M. Bernard. He was now able to cross his chamber, by the aid of crutches; and was rapidly regaining vigor and strength.

The strange melancholy that so darkened his fine countenance only vanished when Lady Violante came to while away, with her bright presence, the tedious hours of confinement. Then a new existence dawned upon him, another temperament to banish his old self, and he was gay and sparkling in his conversation as the most light-hearted of the cavaliers who sought her favor.

"I have come to scold you," said she merrily one afternoon as she entered his apartment, and was greeted with a brightening eye. "Why did you so suddenly vanish from the window, as we rode up the avenue? Count Germain is much interested in you and longs to see you. Why do you so obstinately refuse to receive any visitors? He might so much enliven these dreary hours. Promise me I may bring him here to-morrow."

Bernard was gnawing his lip fiercely. "Never!" exclaimed he, in so deep a tone it startled her. "Have patience, Lady Violante, I am fast growing stronger, you will soon be rid of me. Till then you must remember the promise you gave that I should be indulged in this one imperative demand."

"Now you are unjust as well as unkind. You know nothing is further from my thoughts than the wish to be rid of you. It is only that I cannot bear to think of you immured here in the dreary loneliness of this chamber, that makes me press upon you other acquaintances. Besides, I am vexed that others should so misunderstand you, the Count—"

"What of him?" demanded Bernard with a flashing eye.

"Nay, do not look so angry. He does not understand it—and jests a little about the misanthropical hermit who saved my life. He will not comprehend my explanations."

"I beg you will not make any explanations to Count Germain on my behalf!" began Bernard haughtily; but her beseeching glance arrested him.

"Ah," said she, reproachfully, "why will you not allow others to know you as good and noble as you appear to me? What is this mystery that surrounds you?"

The black cloud came sweeping over his face, the gloomy fire lent its gleam to his eye, and with a bitter, bitter sigh, he said:

"It is my fate. I cannot help it. I wonder that you do not also shrink from me. You who know more of the mystery than any other. Do not let pity keep you here, Lady Violante."

"Alone!" sighed she in return. "I would there was less concealment—and yet I must own it is not pity, not even gratitude, that draws me toward you."

"What then?" demanded he eagerly. "Sincere, earnest friendship," replied she in clear, steady tones—the sincere eyes never blenching from his impassioned gaze. "I like you, I see so much that is good and noble beneath this cold mask you strive to wear. There is genuine affinity between our minds—and it grieves me that others cannot share in my appreciation of your worth."

He checked a bitter smile, to say mournfully:

"It is your own surpassing goodness—not any worth of mine; and you know nothing of me—not even my name—if I be noble or peasant, rich or poor, innocent or guilty."

"Nay," said she, catching only at one idea, "no one could think of you as a peasant—your very carriage assures one of noble blood!"

Again, a scornful, cynical smile was repressed as he turned his face from observation—and then he said, with a gravity that was almost solemn:

"Lady Violante, I am a mysterious being—isolation and danger and mystery are my portion; but again I assure you it is my misfortune, not my deserving. Very sweet and precious to me is the sympathy you have given—these days, filled with pain though they have been, are the happiest of my sorrowful life. That I was the humble instrument of saving you from a frightful death, will be a cause of thanksgiving and rejoicing to my dying day—and yet I am so proud that any attentions shown to me by you out of gratitude to that, become hateful and repulsive. O, Lady Violante, I, so unloved and alien to all the rest of the world, cannot afford to lose the sweet drop in my bitter cup. Think not of what is due your preserver, but care for me for my sake."

The fair girl looked at him wistfully.

The rapidly blushing and paling cheek betrayed the agitation he strove to conceal. The starting tear that only for a moment dimmed the eagle eye, moved her deeply.

"Strange mortal!" said she, holding out her hand with the tenderness of a woman, and yet the dignity of a queen. "How many times already have you extorted from me that aside from all I owe you I cannot help admiring and loving you."

He bent over her little hand, and with the one respectful kiss felt a burning tear.

"God bless you! come what will hereafter, I shall be able to say, the cup of joy has once been lifted to my lips, and the memory of this moment shall have power to banish my gloom."

"Come," said Violante, taking up a book from the table, "you shall finish the poem we began yesterday. Never heard I reader before, who could so magnetically charm the ear. All through my ride with the Count, I was longing to return and finish the book with you. Let us not waste the time—for when my father is free from the old Count's visit in the library, he will make his usual call here, and interrupt us."

M. Bernard took the book, but paused to say:

"The old Count Germain! I have heard of him; what sort of a character do you give him?"

"Indeed I can hardly tell. He is certainly variable. At one time, genial, courteous and charming—and then again, so morose, reserved and suspicious—he quite frightens me from him. But his son—"

"Never mind his son!" interrupted her companion with a frown.

"Poor, young Count Germain! what persistent dislike you manifest for him!" said Violante, laughing—"while he is so extremely anxious to know you."

"A single meeting would suffice for us both," muttered Bernard.

"Do you know him?" asked the girl, with a new suspicion.

The abruptness of the question startled him, and he faltered:

"I did once—that is, I have heard—"

and then waiting to collect his thoughts, he added, bitterly—"be sure, if you are a friend to either of us, you will never bring about a meeting, or mention the name of one to the other."

Lady Violante was lost in deep and evidently painful meditation. He watched her face uneasily, and ventured meekly:

"I told you I was made up of mysteries—do not try to pierce them, and vex yourself over what will be unfathomable and unsatisfactory. Let the Germain be banished from our conversation henceforward, and it will be pleasanter for us both. Now for our poem."

But another interruption came from a servant, who brought in a small basket of fruit, which he said an old woman had left at the door, saying it was for the sick stranger at the Chateau.

Lady Violante saw from her guest's face the basket was of no common significance, and dismissing the servant, she herself handed it to Bernard.

The moment the door closed upon the servant he hastily rolled out the fruit, and drew forth, as she had already anticipated, a small slip of paper, over which his eye darted hastily, while he muttered, evidently forgetful of his auditor:

"Selfish that I have been in the intoxication of my own happiness, I have forgotten how much she must suffer from suspense and anxiety. It was rash and reckless for her to venture here in any disguise."

Lady Violante rose in embarrassment; she did not wish to hear what was intended only to be spoken in his own mind—but with a mournful smile he returned to the present, and tossing her the note, he said abruptly:

"You will see why I must appeal to you once more for your aid. I did not mean to compromise you again, in the slightest way, but you see what frantic alarm it is needful for me to calm."

The note was written in a delicate female hand, and ran thus:

"I can bear my agonized suspense no longer. Why do you not write to me again? I heard from passing gossipers what has happened, and what detains you at the Chateau; but a thought and fear assails me. I see our enemies going thither every day! How will you escape their eyes? It was noble in you to save the beautiful young lady—but oh, it was rash to risk so much in remaining at the Castle. I tremble for you lest you fall into their hands, Bernard, Bernard, come back to me as soon as possible!"

Lady Violante read it through, and then in a slightly constrained voice said:

"I am only more bewildered. Surely I can truthfully assure you no enemies to you come near the Chateau. The lady's fears are groundless."

He shook his head impatiently.

"Let us have no further discussion concerning them. I will not conceal from you, so much faith have I in your generous sympathy with misfortune—that it is the Germain to whom she refers—nor deny that my careful avoidance of the young Count is to prevent the unpleasant results of his recognition. I know all I say plunges you yet deeper in baffled conjecture, yet I would fain implore you to have faith in me; not as a right, but as a favor I ask it."

She sighed even while she smiled.

A QUEEN'S "SEA DOGS."

The Voyages of the Elizabethan Seamen Extended to Every Part of the World.

During most of Queen Elizabeth's reign there was no open war with Spain. On the contrary, there was nominal friendship. But the privateering captains were not slow to perceive that the queen and her council had no objection to their expeditions, provided they did not so openly violate the law of nations as to create great embarrassments for the government.

The voyages of the Elizabethan seamen extended to almost every part of the world. In the last days of Edward VI. Sir Hugh Willoughby had perished in the northern ice, and Richard Chancellor had made his way through the White sea to the country and the court of the czar of Muscovy. Elizabethans followed in their wake. Under Frobisher and Davis they explored Meta Incognita and Greenland and Hudson's straits. With good Sir Humphrey Gilbert they attempted the planting of Newfoundland; with Lane and White they went out to Raleigh's colony of Roanoke. They followed the Portuguese and the Dutch to the East Indies, and with James Lancaster's wonderful voyages began the English trade with Java and Sumatra and Malacca. They went with Hawkins in the Solomon or the Jesus of Lubeck to gather slaves upon the African coast, or lay off Flores and Corvo to intercept the annual silver fleets that brought to the King of Spain the wealth of Mexico and Peru, or burned his ships in the harbor of Cadiz. But most famous of all were the adventures that marked their freebooting expeditions to the Spanish Main, lured on by fabulous tales of El Dorado or by knowledge of the more substantial wealth which the Spaniards had derived from their rich and abundant provinces in the new world.

Fair Collateral.

A soldier in the guards came to me in Queen's Square to swear to his having lost his duplicate. I looked at the affidavit to see if it were military accoutrements, etc., that he had pawned, when, to my surprise I found that he had pawned a £2 bank note for 10s 6d. On asking an explanation of this odd circumstance he said he received the £2 note and was resolved to pass a jolly evening but not to spend more than a half guinea, and to insure this he pawned the note for that sum, and destroyed the duplicate afterward that he might not be able to raise money on it in case his resolution should give way while he was drinking with his companions.—Cornhill Magazine.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

The Question of Soil Moisture.

An Oklahoma Experiment Station report says:

The heavy rainfall of 1893 had its influence on the farm crops. In general plants grew ranker and taller. Under similar conditions in plowed land the soil moisture was 1.5 per cent higher for the whole year than in 1897. In ordinary prairie sod there was almost 2 per cent increase. The differences in soil moisture and yield of crops on plants under different treatment was not so marked as in a dryer season. Of eight plots plowed at different depths, one plowed four inches deep and one subsoiled to a depth of fifteen inches gave smallest yields. The subsoiled plot contained more moisture than any other of the eight. Two plots containing 17.6 per cent of moisture during March were plowed similarly one week apart. The plots plowed April 4 contained 16.3 per cent during April; that April 11, 14.1 per cent. Stubble ground plowed about June 15 had 14.9 per cent of moisture July 15; while that not plowed had 10.9 per cent. Wheat stubble plowed July 28 had one-fourth more moisture on August 30 than stubble not plowed, September 9 the stubble that was plowed July 28 had one-third more moisture than stubble plowed September 1. Rolling the soil in the spring did not increase the moisture in the surface foot. Bottom land planted in corn had more moisture in the surface during July and less during the first half of August than upland with the same crop.

Oats sown March 14, at the depth of one and two inches came up several days sooner and 10 to 30 per cent better than when planted four to six inches deep. Planted March 25 there was but little difference in the number that came up when planted one, two, four or six inches deep, but the deepest plantings came up slower. Indian corn planted March 14 came up very poorly. None planted six inches deep came up. Planted March 25 there was a fair stand at different depths. Planted March 28 one and two inches deep gave almost a perfect stand, while that planted four and six inches deep gave a poor stand. April 4 and 11 the best stand was secured from planting four inches deep. For later plantings corn came up better when planted one and two inches deep. In general it is best to plant shallow in moist soil and early in the season. In late planting and in dry soil a more satisfactory stand can be had and the corn will come up sooner if planted about four inches deep. Kafir corn is much more easily harmed by wet and cold weather than Indian corn and should be planted about a month later. Planted one or two inches deep it will come up better than if planted deeper. It may be counted a good stand if 50 to 75 per cent of the grains planted come up.

Hardiness of Trees.

From Farmers' Review: The Department of Horticulture has for several years been co-operating with the division of forestry of the Department of Agriculture to test the hardiness of trees produced from seeds sent from various sections of the country, north and south, east and west. The seeds were planted in plats having the same soil and exposure and have been subjected to the same conditions. On March 7, 1898, notes were made on the effects of the winter upon the trees, and some striking facts were revealed. As a rule no injury was to be noted from the winter on trees grown from seed sent from states either north or west of this point. On the other hand, trees from seed sent in from points southeast of this were very generally injured from the cold. The injury varied with both the species of trees and the location. Black walnut showed the greatest injury of any species and was most affected when the seed had come from the southeastern coast region—Georgia and Alabama. This point, besides being of scientific interest in showing the decided effect of climate on the constitutionality of plants, has also a practical value for the tree planter. It shows that trees from seed grown at southeastern points must suffer more or less when subjected to this climate, and suggests that young trees transplanted from the same regions would be even more seriously affected. Further experiments along the same line are in progress under direction of the department.

Prevention of Smut in Wheat.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station has, for several years past, conducted experiments in the prevention of the smuts in wheat. There are found on wheat in Ohio, loose smut and stinking smut. The loose smut is that noticeable at blossoming time, which destroys, usually, the entire head. It is, perhaps, more general, though usually much less destructive than the stinking smut, which converts the kernels of wheat into masses of dark brown, ill-smelling fungus spores. This station has been successful in preventing both of these smuts and recommends the following methods: For stinking smut in wheat.—In all the methods employed for stinking smut it is probably advisable to immerse the grain first in cold water, with stirring, and to skim off the smut balls which will, in this manner, rise to the top of the water. After this is completed either of the following treatments may be employed: 1. Hot Water. Immerse this skimmed seed, contained in gunny bag or suitable wire mesh vessel, for ten minutes in hot water, at a temperature of 133 degrees Fahrenheit. Then dry on smut-free surface, cooling quickly by thoroughly stirring, or cold water may be employed to cool the grain. Remember, these temperatures are to be determined by a thermometer; longer immersion than ten minutes, at that temperature, may injure the grain.

2. Bluestone, Copper Sulfate. Make a solution at the rate of one pound to five gallons of water; in this solution immerse the seed wheat, freed from the smut balls as before described, for ten minutes. Allow to stand ten minutes in sack to drain, then spread and dry with air-slaked lime, shoveling over frequently.

Or by sprinkling, use the above solution at the rate of one gallon to one bushel of grain in heap. Apply by sprinkling-can at intervals of five or ten minutes; stir the whole so as to be uniformly wet; at the end, say, of one hour, shovel over and dry with lime, if desired.

3. Formalin. This may be used at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of water and the seed treated by sprinkling or by immersion for thirty minutes.

For loose smut of wheat.—Modified hot water treatment as follows: Soak the seed grain for four hours in cold water, let stand four hours more in the wet sacks; then immerse for five minutes in hot water at a temperature of 133 degrees Fahrenheit; spread at once on a smut-free surface to dry, and sow. Use one-half more seed to replace that injured by the treatment.

Fruit Growing in Northern Michigan.

At a farmers' institute held recently at Gand Traverse, Mich., A. P. Gray gave his ideas upon "Fruit Growing in Northern Michigan." He said he would not present his remarks as a lawyer does, from one side only, but would give both the advantages and disadvantages. Said he: "One advantage we have in northern Michigan is that we have one hour more sunlight than Ohio and Indiana. Some of the disadvantages are the cold climate, long winters and dry soil. Location is a great subject to be considered. High ground is important for fruit trees; the cold sinks into the valleys, and the heat from the valleys rises and keeps the trees from freezing. The years we have had the least rain we have had the best fruit, and the grain those years was of the very best quality. It takes a long drouth to affect a tree. Fruit trees do not yield much real profit under ten years of age. Slow growth, however, is our salvation, for when trees mature early they decay early. The farther north fruit will mature, the better its quality. Fruit growing is being pushed farther north each year. We are gaining in this respect."

Make Your Own Plant Cuttings.

The cuttings of the plants to be used in the flower garden should be rooted during the months of February or March. Geraniums made during these months should be covered with blooms during the summer months if they are given proper care. Other plants that add greatly to the beauty of the garden, and which may be propagated by cuttings, are the Coleus, Iresine, Althermanthera and Centaurea. These plants all root readily from cuttings, they can be started in a cutting box in the window, which should be as long and wide as desired, for the limited space and about four or five inches deep. It should be filled with clean river sand. When the cuttings are first made they should be shaded during the heat of the day and sprinkled several times a day until the cuttings become thoroughly established. The sand should always be kept moist, but never wet. Cuttings are often rooted in a deep plate filled with moist sand. There are various contrivances used for rooting cuttings, but in each case the rooting medium is clean moist sand. Soil is apt to become soggy.—W. H. Moore in Farmers' Review.

How to Kill the Leaf Hopper.

From farmers' Review: Leaf hopper, Thrip and Erythroneura vitis are all different names for one small insect, which is often very numerous on grape vines during summer. It is about an eighth of an inch long, of a light color, and marked by three dark red bands. They fly from their position on the under side of the leaves when the vines are shaken and soon light again. To combat them in the summer when their destructive work is noticeable is difficult. Now is the time. They may be found under the leaves near the vines. If the vineyard is cleaned of all litter and this promptly burned many will be destroyed. The insects remaining on the ground can be killed by a spray of coal oil emulsion.

American-Grown Chicory.—American-grown chicory has to contend against strong prejudice upon the part of ignorant foreigners who have become accustomed to a certain brand in the mother country, and insist upon having it here. There is also bitter opposition on the part of men who have established factories in this country for finishing the root imported from Europe, in some instances from their own estates or farms. As far as quality is concerned the American root is fully equal to the imported article, and would win its way upon its merits were it not for the two mentioned forces opposing it. The department feels confident that, were the opposition overcome, the American market could be supplied with home-grown chicory, and the money which has been annually going abroad could be retained among our own people. It is gratifying in this connection that progress is being made, and that American chicory is now seen upon the market in fair quantity.—Rural New Yorker.

Goodyear Rubber Company Believes in Expansion.

The Goodyear Rubber Company came to St. Paul in 1885, locating at 181 East Third street, subsequently moving into the stores Nos. 98, 100 and 102 East Seventh street, the buildings having been extended on the first floor in order to give them facilities for their wholesale business.

The jobbing business of the company in St. Paul has increased steadily each year for the past four years, and they have now rented the upper part of the adjoining building, giving them two floors of Nos. 92, 94 and 96—size of rooms 50x90 feet—which really adds 50 per cent to the space they formerly had for carrying stock. The variety and quantity of goods necessary to meet the demands of the trade in this section of the country made it necessary for the company to have more room. Their brands of goods have become well and favorably known; so that in many instances dealers are seeking the agency for the sale of the goods.

Any dealers who have not had business relations with this company can obtain, by sending for it, one of their catalogues of overshoes, mackintoshes, mechanical goods or sundries. Their catalogues are furnished only to dealers. Ninety-five per cent of the business of the company at St. Paul is wholesale.

THE RIGHTFUL HEIR

By M. T. CALDOR.

He who had named himself Bernard watched her with feverish eyes. "And what shall I do with it?" asked she, as she folded the narrow slip of paper.

"Ah, if I could help it—believe me, I would rather cut off my right hand than ask it of you, but it is for the sake of another—better, purer than I. I must implore you to carry it yourself to the foot of the great Craig that overhangs the river, at the end of the chestnut woods, in the evening. Will you, dare you do it, Lady Violante? When I assure you no earthly harm can come of it to you; and much, very much anxiety may be spared me, and another who is very dear to me."

Lady Violante drew a long breath, but said firmly: "Certainly, I will do it. Why do you doubt it? I have often strayed as far, with only a servant in attendance."

"Ah, yes, but there must be no servant near to see or suspect anything. You must promise no living thing shall see that, hear a word of this conversation, or know aught that may be hereafter connected with the cliff in your mind."

The mystery was growing startling! Lady Violante's cheek blanched, and for the first time she hesitated.

"Ah!" said he, bitterly, while his glittering eye followed the changes of her face. "I knew it would be so—you promised to trust me, but you are already doubting me, and are ready to retreat."

"No, no!" exclaimed she, impetuously—"I will not retreat, I will do all you ask of me."

"And no one—not even your father—most of all, Count Germain, your lover, shall know what I have said to you?" asked he, eagerly.

"No one," repeated she, firmly. "I take your assurance, that there is nothing in the transaction to compromise my character or station, and I pass over your allusion to a lover, where there is no such relation. Now tell me what else there is for me to know."

He had closed his eyes wearily, and his lips writhed with a spasm of pain.

The pity again overpowered reserve—"You are ill, you are suffering, oh, that I could aid you, could bear half the suffering myself. Shall I call Julie?"

"No, no," said he, hurriedly, "let me be assured the note has reached its place, I shall be easier at once. You have but to fasten it to the bough of the lopped larch tree, the only one there, first being sure no one is near, give a low blast on this whistle three times, and then you may return as speedily as you please. My errand will be performed."

He disengaged an ivory whistle from a chain around his neck, and held it toward her.

She received it with a gentle assuring smile, adding:

"Have no fears. I will find means to obey your injunction to the letter."

"Heaven bless you!" said he, turning his face to the pillow to hide its agitation.

And Lady Violante glided softly from the room.

Early the next morning she came again, and taking advantage of the momentary absence of the attendant, she laid the whistle on his pillow, saying quietly:

"I have performed your first task; now show your gratitude by growing more cheerful, and settling me another."

He looked up anxiously.

"And no one saw you? you are sure of that?"

"Quite certain. Moreover, I took an early ride that way this morning, and the note was gone."

He drew a long breath of relief. A smile, so rarely beautiful it almost startled her, lit up his pallid face, and with a soft sigh, he whispered:

"Now I am ready to obey my nurse, and rest."

CHAPTER II.

IX weeks had elapsed since Beauvais Chateau had sheltered the stranger, who had rescued its heiress from a terrible death. Still he was as much a stranger to the Count and all the household as at first, and was only known as M. Bernard. He was now able to cross his chamber, by the aid of crutches; and was rapidly regaining vigor and strength.

The strange melancholy that so darkened his fine countenance only vanished when Lady Violante came to while away, with her bright presence, the tedious hours of confinement. Then a new existence dawned upon him, another temperament to banish his old self, and he was gay and sparkling in his conversation as the most light-hearted of the cavaliers who sought her favor.

"I have come to aoid you," said she merrily one afternoon as she entered his apartment, and was greeted with a brightening eye. "Why did you so suddenly vanish from the window, as we rode up the avenue? Count Germain is much interested in you and longs to see you. Why do you so obstinately refuse to receive any visitors? He might so much enliven these dreary hours. Promise me I may bring him here to-morrow."

Bernard was gnawing his lip fiercely. "Never!" exclaimed he, in so deep a tone it startled her. "Have patience, Lady Violante, I am fast growing stronger, you will soon be rid of me. Till then you must remember the promise you gave that I should be indulged in this one imperative demand."

"Now you are unjust as well as unkind. You know nothing is further from my thoughts than the wish to be rid of you. It is only that I cannot bear to think of you immured here in the dreary loneliness of this chamber, that makes me press upon you other acquaintances. Besides, I am vexed that others should so misunderstand you, the Count—"

"What of him?" demanded Bernard with a flashing eye.

"Nay, do not look so angry. He does not understand it—and jests a little about the misanthropical hermit who saved my life. He will not comprehend my explanations."

"I beg you will not make any explanations to Count Germain on my behalf!" began Bernard haughtily; but her beseeching glance arrested him.

"Ah," said she, reproachfully, "why will you not allow others to know you as good and noble as you appear to me? What is this mystery that surrounds you?"

The black cloud came sweeping over his face, the gloomy fire lent its gleam to his eye, and with a bitter, bitter sigh, he said:

"It is my fate. I cannot help it. I wonder that you do not also shrink from me. You who know more of the mystery than any other. Do not let pity keep you here, Lady Violante."

"Alone!" sighed she in return. "I would there was less concealment—and yet I must own it is not pity, not even gratitude, that draws me toward you."

"What then?" demanded he eagerly. "Sincere, earnest friendship," replied she in clear, steady tones—the sincere eyes never blenching from his impassioned gaze. "I like you, I see so much that is good and noble beneath this cold mask you strive to wear. There is genuine affinity between our minds—and it grieves me that others cannot share in my appreciation of your worth."

He checked a bitter smile, to say mournfully:

"It is your own surpassing goodness—not any worth of mine; and you know nothing of me—not even my name—if I be noble or peasant, rich or poor, innocent or guilty."

"Nay," said she, catching only at one idea, "no one could think of you as a peasant—your very carriage assures one of noble blood!"

Again, a scornful, cynical smile was repressed as he turned his face from observation—and then he said, with a gravity that was almost solemn:

"Lady Violante, I am a mysterious being—isolation and danger and mystery are my portion; but again I assure you it is my misfortune, not my deserving. Very sweet and precious to me is the sympathy you have given—these days, filled with pain though they have been, are the happiest of my sorrowful life. That I was the humble instrument of saving you from a frightful death, will be a cause of thanksgiving and rejoicing to my dying day—and yet I am so proud that any attentions shown to me by you out of gratitude to that, become hateful and repulsive. O, Lady Violante, I, so unloved and alien to all the rest of the world, cannot afford to lose the sweet drop in my bitter cup. Think not of what is due your preserver, but care for me for my sake."

The fair girl looked at him wistfully. The rapidly blushing and paling cheek betrayed the agitation he strove to conceal. The starting tear that only for a moment dimmed the eagle eye, moved her deeply.

"Strange mortal!" said she, holding out her hand with the tenderness of a woman, and yet the dignity of a queen. "How many times already have you exerted from me that aside from all I owe you I cannot help admiring and loving you."

He bent over her little hand, and with the one respectful kiss fell a burning tear.

"God bless you! come what will hereafter, I shall be able to say, the cup of joy has once been lifted to my lips, and the memory of this moment shall have power to banish my gloom."

"Come," said Lady Violante, taking up a book from the table, "you shall finish the poem we began yesterday. Never heard I reader before, who could so magnetically charm the ear. All through my ride with the Count, I was longing to return and finish the book with you. Let us not waste the time—for when my father is free from the old Count's visit in the library, he will make his usual call here, and interrupt us."

M. Bernard took the book, but paused to say:

"The old Count Germain! I have heard of him; what sort of a character do you give him?"

"Indeed I can hardly tell. He is certainly variable. At one time, genial, courteous and charming—and then again, so morose, reserved and suspicious—he quite frightens me from him. But his son—"

"Never mind his son!" interrupted her companion with a frown.

"Poor, young Count Germain! what persistent dislike you manifest for him!" said Lady Violante, laughing—"while he is so extremely anxious to know you."

"A single meeting would suffice for us both," muttered Bernard.

"Do you know him?" asked the girl, with a new suspicion.

The abruptness of the question startled him, and he faltered:

"I did once—that is, I have heard—"

and then waiting to collect his thoughts, he added, bitterly—"be sure, if you are a friend to either of us, you will never bring about a meeting, or mention the name of one to the other."

Lady Violante was lost in deep and evidently painful meditation. He watched her face uneasily, and ventured meekly:

"I told you I was made up of mysteries—do not try to pierce them, and vex yourself over what will be unfathomable and unsatisfactory. Let the Germans be banished from our conversation henceforward, and it will be pleasanter for us both. Now for our poem."

But another interruption came from a servant, who brought in a small basket of fruit, which he said an old woman had left at the door, saying it was for the sick stranger at the Chateau.

Lady Violante saw from her guest's face the basket was of no common significance, and dismissing the servant, she herself handed it to Bernard.

The moment the door closed upon the servant he hastily rolled out the fruit, and drew forth, as she had already anticipated, a small slip of paper, over which his eye darted hastily, while he muttered, evidently forgetful of his auditor:

"Selfish that I have been! in the intoxication of my own happiness, I have forgotten how much she must suffer from suspense and anxiety. It was rash and reckless for her to venture here in any disguise."

Lady Violante rose in embarrassment; she did not wish to hear what was intended only to be spoken in his own mind—but with a mournful smile he returned to the present, and tossing her the note, he said abruptly:

"You will see why I must appeal to you once more for your aid. I did not mean to compromise you again, in the slightest way, but you see what frantic alarm it is needful for me to calm."

The note was written in a delicate female hand, and ran thus:

"I can bear my agonized suspense no longer. Why do you not write to me again? I heard from passing gossips what has happened, and what detains you at the Chateau; but a thought and fear assails me. I see our enemies going thither every day! How will you escape their eyes? It was noble in you to save the beautiful young lady—but oh, it was rash to risk so much in remaining at the Castle. I tremble for you lest you fall into their hands. Bernard, Bernard, come back to me as soon as possible!"

Lady Violante read it through, and then in a slightly constrained voice said:

"I am only more bewildered. Surely I can truthfully assure you no enemies to you come near the Chateau. The lady's fears are groundless."

He shook his head impatiently.

"Let us have no further discussion concerning them. I will not conceal from you, so much faith have I in your generous sympathy with misfortune—that it is the Germans to whom she refers—nor deny that my careful avoidance of the young Count is to prevent the unpleasant results of his recognition. I know all I say plunges you yet deeper in baffled conjecture, yet I would fain implore you to have faith in me; not as a right, but as a favor I ask it."

She sighed even while she smiled.

The Voyages of the Elizabethan Seamen Extended to Every Part of the World.

During most of Queen Elizabeth's reign there was no open war with Spain. On the contrary, there was nominal friendship. But the privateering captains were not slow to perceive that the queen and her council had no objection to their expeditions, provided they did not so openly violate the law of nations as to create great embarrassments for the government.

The voyages of the Elizabethan seamen extended to almost every part of the world. In the last days of Edward VI. Sir Hugh Willoughby had perished in the northern ice, and Richard Chancellor had made his way through the White sea to the country and the court of the czar of Muscovy. Elizabethans followed in their wake. Under Frobisher and Davis they explored Meta Incognita and Greenland and Hudson's straits. With good Sir Humphrey Gilbert they attempted the planting of Newfoundland; with Lane and White they went out to Raleigh's colony of Roanoke. They followed the Portuguese and the Dutch to the East Indies, and with James Lancaster's wonderful voyages began the English trade with Java and Sumatra and Malacca. They went with Hawkins in the Solomon or the Jesus of Lubeck to gather slaves upon the African coast, or lay off Flores and Corvo to intercept the annual silver fleets that brought to the King of Spain the wealth of Mexico and Peru, or burned his ships in the harbor of Cadiz. But most famous of all were the adventures that marked their freebooting expeditions to the Spanish Main, lured on by fabulous tales of El Dorado or by knowledge of the more substantial wealth which the Spaniards had derived from their rich and abundant provinces in the new world.

Fair Collateral.

A soldier in the guards came to me in Queen's Square to swear to his having lost his duplicate. I looked at the affidavit to see if it were military accoutrements, etc., that he had pawned, when, to my surprise I found that he had pawned a £2 bank note for 10s 6d.

On asking an explanation of this odd circumstance he said he received the £2 note and was resolved to pass a jolly evening but not to spend more than a half guinea, and to insure this he pawned the note for that sum, and destroyed the duplicate afterward that he might not be able to raise money on it in case his resolution should give way while he was drinking with his companions.—Cornhill Magazine.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

SomeUp-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

The Question of Soil Moisture.

An Oklahoma Experiment Station report says:

The heavy rainfall of 1893 had its influence on the farm crops. In general plants grew ranker and taller. Under similar conditions in plowed land the soil moisture was 1.5 per cent higher for the whole year than in 1897. In ordinary prairie sod there was almost 2 per cent increase. The differences in soil moisture and yield of crops on plats under different treatment was not so marked as in a dryer season. Of eight plats plowed at different depths, one plowed four inches deep and one subsoiled to a depth of fifteen inches gave smallest yields. The subsoiled plat contained more moisture than any other of the eight. Two plats containing 17.6 per cent of moisture during March were plowed similarly one week apart. The plats plowed April 4 contained 16.3 per cent during April; that April 11, 14.1 per cent. Stubble plowed about June 15 had 14.9 per cent of moisture July 15; while that not plowed had 10.3 per cent. Wheat stubble plowed July 28 had one-fourth more moisture on August 30 than stubble not plowed. September 9 the stubble that was plowed July 28 had one-third more moisture than stubble plowed September 1. Rolling the soil in the spring did not increase the moisture in the surface foot. Bottom land planted in corn had more moisture in the surface during July and less during the first half of August than upland with the same crop.

Oats sown March 14, at the depth of one and two inches came up several days sooner and 10 to 30 per cent better than when planted four to six inches deep. Planted March 25 there was but little difference in the number that came up when planted one, two, four or six inches deep, but the deepest plantings came up slower. Indian corn planted March 14 came up very poorly. None planted six inches deep came up. Planted March 25 there was a fair stand at different depths. Planted March 28 one and two inches deep gave almost a perfect stand, while that planted four and six inches deep gave a poor stand. April 4 and 11 the best stand was secured from planting four inches deep. For later plantings corn came up better when planted one and two inches deep. In general it is best to plant shallow in moist soil and early in the season. In late planting and in dry soil a more satisfactory stand can be had and the corn will come up sooner if planted about four inches deep. Kafir corn is much more easily harmed by wet and cold weather than Indian corn and should be planted about a month later. Planted one or two inches deep it will come up better than if planted deeper. It may be counted a good stand if 50 to 75 per cent of the grains planted come up.

Hardiness of Trees.

From Farmers' Review: The Department of Horticulture has for several years been co-operating with the division of forestry of the Department of Agriculture to test the hardiness of trees produced from seeds sent from various sections of the country, north and south, east and west. The seeds were planted in plats having the same soil and exposure and have been subjected to the same conditions. On March 7, 1898, notes were made on the effects of the winter upon the trees, and some striking facts were revealed. As a rule no injury was to be noted from the winter on trees grown from seed sent from states either north or west of this point. On the other hand, trees from seed sent in from points southeast of this were very generally injured from the cold. The injury varied with both the species of trees and the location. Black walnut showed the greatest injury of any species and was most affected when the seed had come from the southeastern coast region—Georgia and Alabama. This point, besides being of scientific interest in showing the decided effect of climate on the constitutionality of plants, has also a practical value for the tree planter. It shows that trees from seed grown at southeastern points must suffer more or less when subjected to this climate, and suggests that young trees transplanted from the same regions would be even more seriously affected. Further experiments along the same line are in progress under direction of the department.

Prevention of Smut in Wheat.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station has, for several years past, conducted experiments in the prevention of the smuts in wheat. There are found on wheat in Ohio, loose smut and stinking smut. The loose smut is that noticeable at blossoming time, which destroys, usually, the entire head. It is, perhaps, more general, though usually much less destructive than the stinking smut, which converts the kernels of wheat into masses of dark brown, ill-smelling fungus spores. This station has been successful in preventing both of these smuts and recommends the following methods:

For stinking smut in wheat.—In all the methods employed for stinking smut it is probably advisable to immerse the grain first in cold water, with stirring, and to skim off the smut balls which will, in this manner, rise to the top of the water. After this is completed either of the following treatments may be employed:

1. Hot Water. Immerse this skimmed seed, contained in gunny bag or suitable wire mesh vessel, for ten minutes in hot water, at a temperature of 133 degrees Fahrenheit. Then dry on smut-free surface, cooling quickly by thoroughly stirring, or cold water may be employed to cool the grain. Remember, these temperatures are to be determined by a thermometer; longer immersion than ten minutes, at that temperature, may injure the grain.

2. Bluestone, Copper Sulfate. Make a solution at the rate of one pound to five gallons of water; in this solution immerse the seed wheat, freed from the smut balls as before described, for ten minutes. Allow to stand ten minutes in sack to drain, then spread and dry with air-slaked lime, shoveling over frequently.

Or by sprinkling, use the above solution at the rate of one gallon to one bushel of grain in heap. Apply by sprinkling-can at intervals of five or ten minutes; stir the whole so as to be uniformly wet; at the end, say, of one hour, shovel over and dry with lime, if desired.

3. Formalin. This may be used at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of water and the seed treated by sprinkling or by immersion for thirty minutes.

For loose smut of wheat.—Modified hot water treatment as follows: Soak the seed grain for four hours in cold water, let stand four hours more in the wet sacks; then immerse for five minutes in hot water at a temperature of 133 degrees Fahrenheit; spread at once on a smut-free surface to dry, and sow. Use one-half more seed to replace that injured by the treatment.

Fruit Growing in Northern Michigan.

At a farmers' institute held recently at Gand Traverse, Mich., A. P. Gray gave his ideas upon "Fruit Growing in Northern Michigan." He said he would not present his remarks as a lawyer does, from one side only, but would give both the advantages and disadvantages. Said he: "One advantage we have in northern Michigan is that we have one hour more sunlight than Ohio and Indiana. Some of the disadvantages are the cold climate, long winters and dry soil. Location is a great subject to be considered. High ground is important for fruit trees; the cold sinks into the valleys, and the heat from the valleys rises and keeps the trees from freezing. The years we have had the least rain we have had the best fruit, and the grain those years was of the very best quality. It takes a long drought to affect a tree. Fruit trees do not yield much real profit under ten years of age. Slow growth, however, is our salvation, for when trees mature early they decay early. The farther north fruit will mature, the better its quality. Fruit growing is being pushed farther north each year. We are gaining in this respect."

Make Your Own Plant Cuttings.

The cuttings of the plants to be used in the flower garden should be rooted during the months of February or March. Geraniums made during these months should be covered with blooms during the summer months if they are given proper care. Other plants that add greatly to the beauty of the garden, and which may be propagated by cuttings, are the Coleus, Iresine, Althermanthera and Centaurea. These plants all root readily from cuttings, they can be started in a cutting box in the window, which should be as long and wide as desired, for the limited space and about four or five inches deep. It should be filled with clean river sand. When the cuttings are first made they should be shaded during the heat of the day and sprinkled several times a day until the cuttings become thoroughly established. The sand should always be kept moist, but never wet. Cuttings are often rooted in a deep plate filled with moist sand. There are various contrivances used for rooting cuttings, but in each case the rooting medium is clean moist sand. Soil is apt to become soggy.—W. H. Moore in Farmers' Review.

How to Kill the Leaf Hopper.

From Farmers' Review: Leaf hopper, Thrip and Erythroneura vitis are all different names for one small insect, which is often very numerous on grape vines during summer. It is about an eighth of an inch long, of a light color, and marked by three dark red bands. They fly from their position on the under side of the leaves when the vines are shaken and soon light again. To combat them in the summer when their destructive work is noticeable is difficult. Now is the time. They may be found under the leaves near the vines. If the vineyard is cleaned of all litter and this promptly burned many will be destroyed. The insects remaining on the ground can be killed by a spray of coal oil emulsion.

American-Grown Chicory.

American-grown chicory has to contend against strong prejudice upon the part of ignorant foreigners who have become accustomed to a certain brand in the mother country, and insist upon having it here. There is also bitter opposition on the part of men who have established factories in this country for finishing the root imported from Europe, in some instances from their own estates or farms. As far as quality is concerned the American root is fully equal to the imported article, and would win its way upon its merits were it not for the two mentioned forces opposing it. The department feels confident that, were the opposition overcome, the American market could be supplied with home-grown chicory, and the money which has been annually going abroad could be retained among our own people. It is gratifying in this connection that progress is being made, and that American chicory is now seen upon the market in fair quantity.—Rural New Yorker.

"Goodyear Rubber Company Believes in Expansion."

The Goodyear Rubber company came to St. Paul in 1885, locating at 181 East Third street, subsequently moving into the stores Nos. 98, 100 and 102 East Seventh street, the buildings having been extended on the first floor in order to give them facilities for their wholesale business.

The jobbing business of the company in St. Paul has increased steadily each year for the past four years, and they have now rented the upper part of the adjoining building, giving them two floors of Nos. 92, 94 and 96—size of rooms 50x90 feet—which really adds 50 per cent to the space they formerly had for carrying stock. The variety and quantity of goods necessary to meet the demands of the trade in this section of the country made it necessary for the company to have more room. Their brands of goods have become well and favorably known; so that in many instances dealers are seeking the agency for the sale of the goods.

Any dealers who have not had business relations with this company can obtain, by sending for it, one of their catalogues of overshoes mackintoshes, mechanical goods or sundries. Their catalogues are furnished only to dealers. Ninety-five per cent of the business of the company at St. Paul is wholesale.

MYSTERIOUS CASE OF POISONING

Susie Nelson, a Domestic in the Family of J. W. Blake Dies of Irritant Poisoning.

Was it Suicide or Accidental? Is the Question that Cannot Be Settled.

Susie Nelson, a comely domestic in the employ of Mr. J. W. Blake, the milkman, died on Tuesday night in a very mysterious manner. According to Mr. Blake and the other members of the household, Susie retired at the usual time between 9 and 10 o'clock in the best of health, and when Mr. Blake called her about five o'clock in the morning she did not respond. He went into her room to arouse her, and a horrible sight met his view. She was lying on her side on the bed dead, with her limbs drawn up and features distorted as though she had died in great agony. Coroner Reimstad was summoned and a post mortem examination was held Wednesday noon, at which Drs. Groves, Hemstead, Thabas and the coronor were present. The organs of the body were all found in a healthy condition, but the stomach was filled with blood, and a condition existed which could only be produced by an irritant poison, hence the doctors were unanimously of the opinion that death was produced by poisoning. Just what the poison was can only be ascertained by a chemical analysis of the stomach, and as this would cost a hundred dollars, and there are no funds available for the coronor for the purpose it has not been done.

It is a great mystery as to how or why she took the poison. The member's of Mr. Blake's family say she was apparently in the best of health and spirits before retiring, and absolutely no reason exists why she should have tried to kill herself. There is also no evidence that she took poison, as no vial or flask or even a scrap of paper in which poison could have been wrapped, was found in her room, and it has been ascertained that no poison has been sold to her or anyone of whom she could get it, by any dealer in the city. It is also rather remarkable that no member of the family heard the struggles she must have made as indicated by the disordered condition of her room while suffering the agonies of death. The fact that she slept down stairs in a bed room off the dining room, and the family, including Mr. and Mrs. Blake and son, and a Mr. Wallbridge, slept upstairs, may possibly account for it.

Deceased has a sister, Mrs. Mahan, living in this city on 5th street south who is grief stricken at the sudden and mysterious death of her sister. Her parents reside on a farm near Gardiner, N. D.

The funeral services will be held at the Norwegian Lutheran church to-morrow morning, March 18th, Rev. Grove officiating.

A Midnight Bell.

Mr. Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell" is to be presented at Gardner Hall Thursday, March 23rd, by L. R. Stockwell, the very funny comedian and his own company. The following is taken from the San Francisco Post of Dec. 26th: Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell" charmed as many people as could be accommodated at the Alcazar yesterday.

There was appropriateness in the selection of this play for a holiday attraction. Its New England winter scenes, its merry school children, its sewing circle, its church choir, its whole rural environment and atmosphere of domesticity, find peculiar appreciation.

The production was worthy of the approbation it received from the packed audience. Stockwell, who created the character of the Deacon took the role again and made it just as amusing as it was in the years ago. Mr. Fred Fairbank assumed his old character of the Squire and played it admirably. Henry Napur was well suited as the lawyer, and Scott Seaton did very well as the young parson. The bad boy presented by Augustus Taber was as funny as the bad boy portrayed by Eugene Canfield, was an amusing characterization. Miss Nanna Heffron as the school marm, Etta Staffover as the minister's sister and Miss Nellie Truedeman as the village spinster carried the feminine leads.

County Fair Matters.

The meeting of citizens called at the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday afternoon to consider the matter of holding a county fair was not held, as the number of citizens in attendance was not as large as desired. However a meeting has been called for Tuesday evening, March 21, at J. M. Elder's office, and it is desired that all interested in a county fair be in attendance. Certificates of membership, entitling the holder to a voice in all matters concerning the management of the fair, and also admission to the grounds at all times during the fair, have been printed, and the first ten will be auctioned off on Tuesday evening at the meeting. Mr. Elder has already been offered $10 for No. 1, and a great rivalry for them is expected. The rest of the certificates will then be sold at $1.00 by the board of managers, one of whom will be appointed from each township in the county.

It is the intention of the officers to make a large cash premium offer for the best township display at the fair, all exhibits from a township to be considered. It is hoped by creating a friendly rivalry between the various towns of the country to get a better display.

MYSTERIOUS CASE OF POISONING

Susie Nelson, a Domestic in the Family of J. W. Blake Dies of Irritant Poisoning.

Was it Suicide or Accidental? Is the Question that Cannot Be Settled.

Susie Nelson, a comely domestic in the employ of Mr. J. W. Blake, the milkman, died on Tuesday night in a very mysterious manner. According to Mr. Blake and the other members of the household, Susie retired at the usual time between 9 and 10 o'clock in the best of health, and when Mr. Blake called her about five o'clock in the morning she did not respond. He went into her room to arouse her, and a horrible sight met his view. She was lying on her side on the bed dead, with her limbs drawn up and features distorted as though she had died in great agony. Coroner Reimstad was summoned and a post mortem examination was held Wednesday noon, at which Drs. Groves, Hemstead, Thabes and the coronor were present. The organs of the body were all found in a healthy condition, but the stomach was filled with blood, and a condition existed which could only be produced by an irritant poison, hence the doctors were unanimously of the opinion that death was produced by poisoning. Just what the poison was can only be ascertained by a chemical analysis of the stomach, and as this would cost a hundred dollars, and there are no funds available for the coronor for the purpose it has not been done.

It is a great mystery as to how or why she took the poison. The member's of Mr. Blake's family say she was apparently in the best of health and spirits before retiring, and absolutely no reason exists why she should have tried to kill herself. There is also no evidence that she took poison, as no vial or flask or even a scrap of paper in which poison could have been wrapped, was found in her room, and it has been ascertained that no poison has been sold to her or anyone of whom she could get it, by any dealer in the city. It is also rather remarkable that no member of the family heard the struggles she must have made as indicated by the disordered condition of her room while suffering the agonies of death. The fact that she slept down stairs in a bed room off the dining room, and the family, including Mr. and Mrs. Blake and son, and a Mr. Wallbridge, slept upstairs, may possibly account for it.

Deceased has a sister, Mrs. Mahan, living in this city on 5th street south who is grief stricken at the sudden and mysterious death of her sister. Her parents reside on a farm near Gardiner, N. D.

The funeral services will be held at the Norwegian Lutheran church to-morrow morning, March 18th, Rev. Grove officiating.

A Midnight Bell.

Mr. Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell" is to be presented at Gardner Hall Thursday, March 23rd, by L. R. Stockwell, the very funny comedian and his own company. The following is taken from the San Francisco Post of Dec. 26th: Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell" charmed as many people as could be accommodated at the Alcazar yesterday.

There was appropriateness in the selection of this play for a holiday attraction. Its New England winter scenes, its merry school children, its sewing circle, its church choir, its whole rural environment and atmosphere of domesticity, find peculiar appreciation.
